Pebble Beach Co. asks for halt in treatment plant

By NANCY HILLS

THE PEBBLE Beach Co. has requested Pebble Beach Community Services District to withdraw the district's application to California Coastal Commission for a water reclamation plant at Sawmill Gulch in Del Monte Forest and decertify the plant's environmental impact report.

The request, made at the PBCSD board meeting March 14, coincides with the release of a report by consultant Frank Dryden which recommends a reclamation plant be built at the Carmel Sanitary District facility.

The report, commissioned by CSD, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, Monterey County and Carmel-by-the-Sea, will be reviewed at 2 p.m. Friday, March 21 in the Health Department meeting room at the Monterey County Courthouse in Monterey.

Pebble Beach Co. owns a majority of land that would have comprised the assessment district, called Zone A, to pay $10 million toward the $12.6 million PBCSD plant.

The company's request comes after years of conflict between PBCSD and CSD about which agency should build a water reclamation facility for the peninsula. The market for reclaimed water, primarily to water Pebble Beach golf courses, is too small to support two reclamation plants.

The PBCSD board will vote on rescinding the EIR and withdrawing the application at its 9:30 a.m. Thursday, March 27 meeting at the PBCSD office.

Candace Ingram, a community relations consultant for Pebble Beach Co., said that the company felt their "proceedings relating to the projects should be brought to a closure."

Ingram said the company is looking into forming an assessment district for a plant at the CSD facility.

Pebble Beach Co. had applied to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to remove sand for its planned Spanish Bay resort from Sawmill Gulch via a conveyer belt system through the forest.

The supervisors in January placed a condition on the conveyor belt permit saying that Sawmill Gulch be reclaimed as a greenbelt area, eliminating its use as a possible water reclamation plant site.

Monterey County issued a land use permit for the PBCSD plant at Sawmill Gulch in January 1985 and it was due to expire in 1986. With a hearing on its reclamation plant coming up at the Coastal Commission, PBCSD in January 1986 eliminated the county planning process by declaring Sawmill Gulch the only possible site for the plant and therefore exempt from county land use regulations.

George Roberts, legal counsul for PBCSD, said that since no change had taken place in the project since it had been approved by the county in 1985 and all the conditions on the permit were included in the PBCSD board's action in 1986, the supervisors action was politically motivated.

Roberts claimed the supervisors "elected to impose that condition for the declared purpose of stopping our (water reclamation) project. It is simply beyond belief that for 27 Monterey Pine trees they would stop an $11 million public works project. My district cannot believe the supervisors acted on any rational basis."

Both supervisors Karin Strasser Kauffman and Sam Karas, Roberts said, were elected in 1984 by "factions against Spanish Bay" and that both supervisors had indicated that they would do whatever was necessary to oppose this project.

"Spanish Bay got away from them but PBCSD didn't," Roberts said.

Both supervisors Karas and Strasser Kauffman denied any political motives for their actions.

Citing the opposition to the PBCSD plant by neighboring Pacific Grove residents, Karas said he "did not want Pebble Beach putting a sewage treatment plant next to a housing development," and that Spanish Bay was not the only reason he was voted into office.

"There were many other reasons," he added.

Strasser Kauffman said, "I never cam-

Keep Carmel intact

Dear Editor:

Mayor Charlotte Townsend has served the residents of Carmel well, doing all she could to protect the quality of life which everyone who lives here appreciates. To be mobbed by thousands of tourists continually, who clog our sidewalks and roads, takes something important away from that quality of life — tranquility. We are, after all, a one-mile square residential village.

Those in favor of encouraging more tourism don't, for the most part, live within the city limits and are here only during shopping hours, if then. There is no need to attract more tourism. It already has enveloped us to the point of extinction. So many services that were once here are gone: Kip's, the hardware store, Raggett's, the taxi stand, service stations, and in their place galleries galore, boutiques and souvenir shops.

Clint Eastwood may be a very nice person and a smart businessman, but what we need is a person who can and will give their full-time effort to being responsive to the needs of the residents. One who will do their best to keep what's left of the Carmel character intact, insofar as is possible.

Small price to pay

Dear Editor:

In school in Carmel in the 40s we were asked to write an essay stating our views on putting up a boardwalk and concession stands on Scenic Drive. This project, which would have also involved "straightening out" Scenic Drive, was considered a wise and realistic path of development for beachfront property in those days by many business people.

So, I believe we should be grateful to the residents of Carmel who have preserved so much from the devastation that results from the "good for business" approach. If at times they err on the side of pettifogging it is a small price to pay.

Capricious intervention

Dear Editor:

Upon viewing the Carmel River and its rapid rising during the last storms, I find myself greatly concerned about the bank overflowing and a flooding in our area with damages financial, emotional and life-threatening.

I understand that negotiations have long been proceeding between the Odello family and the county of Monterey from the suggestion of the flood control district since the Nolte study was completed on the Carmel River. The only reason that a conclusion has not been achieved is due to the capricious intervention by the city of Carmel, the mayor and the council members and their lawsuit that they have brought against the county of Monterey, the Coastal Commission and the Odello family.

This was done with total disregard to the consequences to the Mission Fields residents and the commercial area to the east. I call this intervention capricious because the Odello land is not within their legal sphere of influence and they are currently petitioning LAFCO to make this "sphere" legal.

Should the Carmel River flood and we do not receive possible protection that the Odellos could give us, the community will be aware of the stand that Carmel and the city council have taken and their actions that obviously show disregard for some very serious needs.

Create new Magna Carta

Dear Editor:

As a resident and business owner of Carmel, I was pleased to hear that the council approved Saks Fifth Avenue to move to the Carmel Plaza. Obviously, this will bring back to the city the certain style and sophistication which we so desperately need since the quality of shops has declined for the last number of years.

However, it shows again, the hypocrisy of the current city government and why we need a desperate change from this current administration.

If they boast of not supporting business growth with major national chains and non-community-minded businesses and are against "progress" as Mrs. Townsend has declared on national news media, then I suggest that Saks should not be allowed in.

It is appalling to believe and support the current administration, which obviously has no sense of integrity and will change its interpretation of the so-called "Magna Carta" when it suits them or perhaps by the pressure they incur from powerful developers.

If we are to assume or agree that Carmel should return to the way "things" were 20 or 30 years ago, then most of us merchants, including I. Magnin and now Saks, should close our doors and leave town. As ridiculous and absurd as that may sound, it is also absurd to support the rhetoric that the incumbents propose.

What we as voters of Carmel need to address is whether we are willing to acknowledge that there are definite changes in our policies and needs in regard to our current problems and create a new and very necessary "Magna Carta" or bury our heads in the sand one more time come election time.

A swinging community?

Dear Editor:

Some experiences are worth sharing. Recently, while walking along Scenic, I met a middle-aged man from Emeryville who asked, "Where's the action?" To my response he said, "But isn't this Eastwood's town?"

If Eastwood becomes in charge won't large numbers of individuals around the nation expect Carmel to be a wide-open, swinging community? The motion picture characters he portrays are different from Eastwood the private citizen, but will this be generally understood? The national media has been saying that he wishes to loosen up his hometown. Who can doubt that if he is elected, our already sizable police department will have to be enlarged.

Development unacceptable

Dear Editor:

The Carmel Heritage is backing the Carmel City Council in its bid to acquire the historic Mission Ranch, thereby removing it from the threat of intensive residential development.

The Mission Ranch dates back to the early 1850s when it was the first dairy in this area. Many of the original buildings still stand.

The 20-acre parcel is presently zoned for the development of 61 single-family residences. This is environmentally unsound and morally unacceptable to me.

I hope that others who feel the way I do will write the Carmel City Council offering support for the acquisition of the Mission Ranch.

Take Clint seriously

Dear Editor:

It is high time that the local media take the candidacy of Mr. Eastwood seriously and not continue to run pictures of the long, lean cowboy with his feet on a mayor's desk while polishing his "six-shooter." He is and has been a successful local resident and business-person who deserves fair representation as such.

Killing the goose

Dear Editor:

Many of us who love this area belong to that large group of people who, themselves comfortably off, enjoy reminders of simple rural life. We are not at our happiest completely surrounded by acres of residences like our own! This is a paradox, perhaps, but it is true.

How refreshing it has been to go to, or drive by, the Mission Ranch, see the old white buildings, the grazing cattle and horses on the green meadowland. Point Lobos and the little bay are beautiful but the rural foreground has a tremendous charm of its own. The combination of the two truly lifts the spirit.

The news that this precious area will perhaps be filled by 61 single-family residences is saddening personally. It is also a strikingly clear-cut example of "killing the goose with the golden egg." Steps like this one will change the Carmel area to a routine sea resort. Let all those who feel this way do what we can to prevent this particular transformation.

No Coney Island

Dear Editor:

My daughter and I are sitting here wearing our Doris Day Pet Foundation T-shirts, wearing Clint Eastwood pins and eating Paul Newman popcorn.

We are from Hollywood originally, all connected with show business; my daughter with animated cartoons, and both my sons still there, one a film editor, the other a screenwriter.

I have been coming to Carmel since 1921 spending vacations in my parents' summer home.

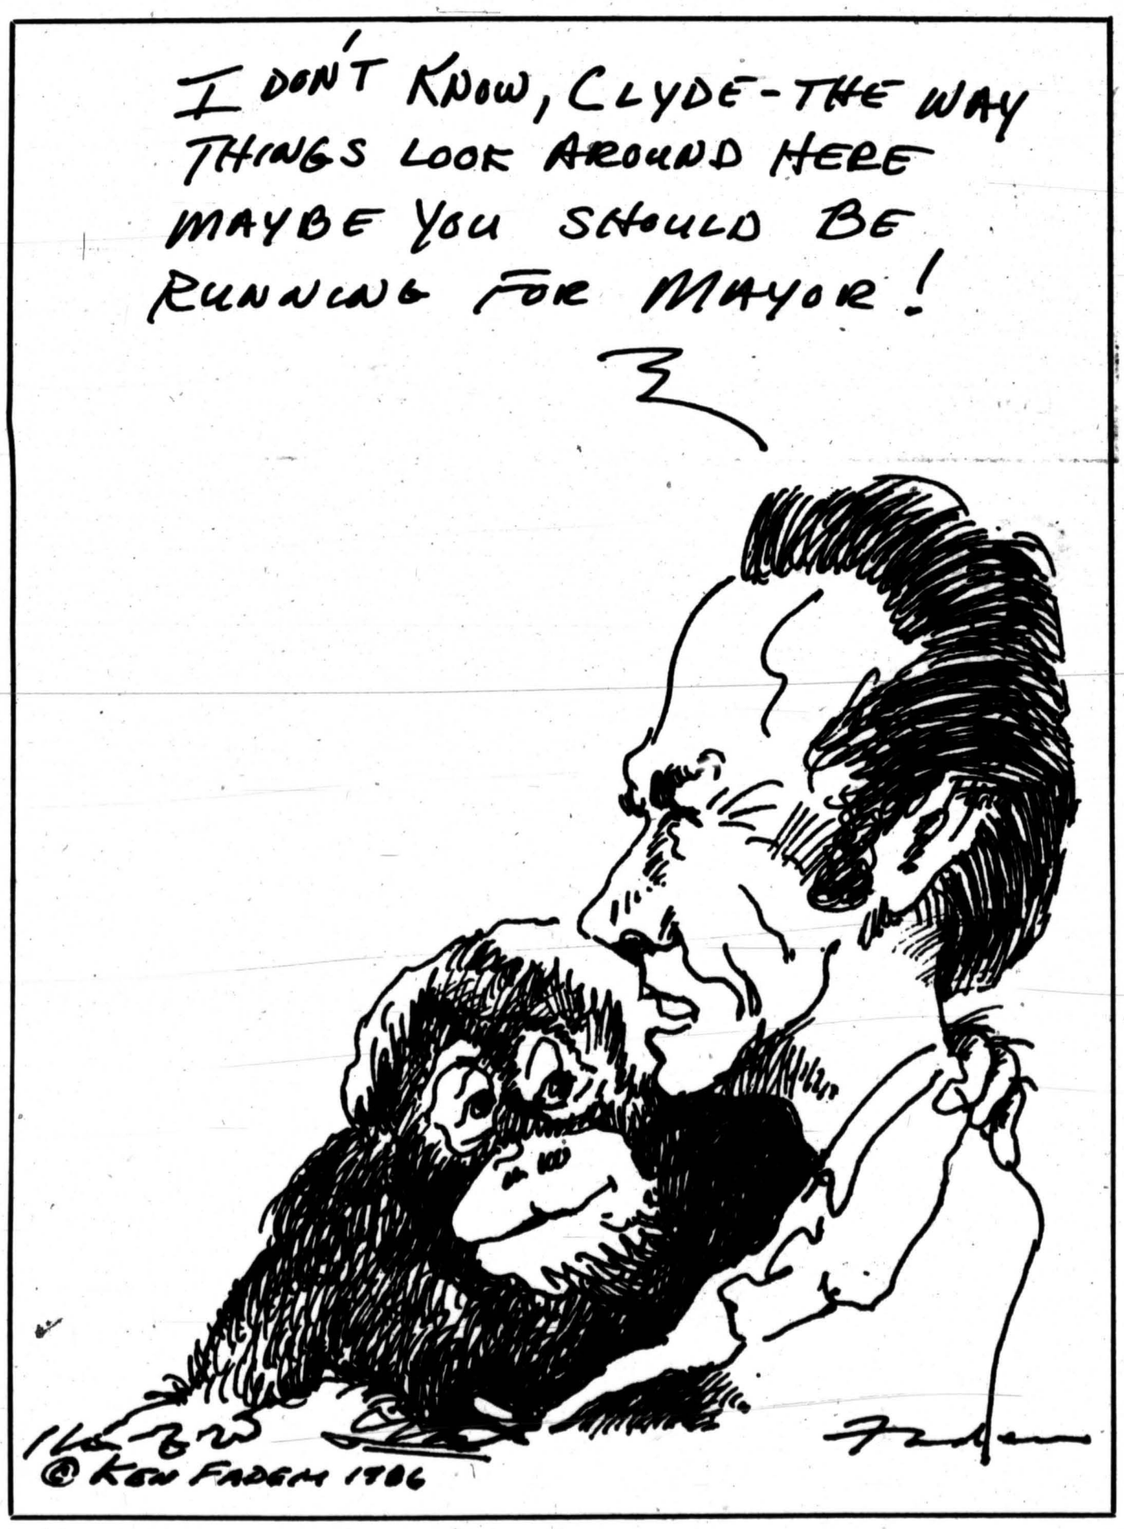

Let me tell you that Clint Eastwood is more like the residents of Carmel in those days than most of the ones today. Down-to-earth, unassuming and genuine.

To quote Mr. Eastwood: "If I liked living in Hollywood, I would live there."

As would Jean Arthur, Joan Fontaine, Merv Griffin, Paul Anka and us.

You have our vote, Clint. Let's take the Coney Island out of Carmel.

Voter fraud charges 'unfair' says Eastwood

By MICHAEL GARDNER

MAYORAL CANDIDATE Clint Eastwood on Tuesday charged that Carmel City Councilman David Maradei, who is facing a stiff challenge for re-election, is behind the recent investigation into potential voter registration fraud in Carmel.

Clint Eastwood

"Maradei has opened a can of worms that he can't close," Eastwood told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula, in response to numerous rumors and inquiries to its office, has launched an investigation into alleged voter registration fraud in Carmel.

Eastwood believes that Maradei is behind the investigation.

"I think the league is being set up by Maradei to take the fall," said Eastwood.

Eastwood continued that "it's not fair to the candidates" for these charges to be hanging over their heads during the campaign.

As far as illegal registrations, Eastwood said, "I haven't heard of any."

Told of Eastwood's remarks, Maradei countered, "The only comment I have is that when I went on television it was with the intent to remind people that this election belongs to the people of Carmel...All we ask is that the citizens of our community be allowed to select their council representatives without outside influence."

Maradei, in a television interview two weeks ago, charged that he knew of at least a half a dozen businesspeople who had registered illegally. He declined to name those people.

Maradei also said he never approached the League of Women Voters about initiating an investigation.

"It has no basis in fact," Maradei said of Eastwood's charge.

The April 8 election has drawn international attention to Carmel as its voters go to the polls to determine whether world-famous actor and director Eastwood will be elected mayor.

Eastwood is challenging incumbent Mayor Charlotte Townsend for the two-year, $200-per-month job. The other two candidates are businessman Paul Laub and Tim Grady, a member of the Environmentalist Party.

The council campaign for two four-year seats pits the two incumbents, Maradei and Robert Stephenson, in a tough battle against a half dozen challengers: Robert Weber, Bob Fischer, Elinor Laiolo, Anne Woolworth, Don Lampson and Tom May.

Two councilmembers are to be elected to four-year terms.

Because of Eastwood's candidacy and the numerous controversial campaign issues, this election has produced a tremendous excitement in Carmel as noted by the surge in voter registrations before the March 10 deadline.

IN ITS final voter registration list, the Monterey County Elections Office reports that 460 new voters registered during the 29-day open registration period prior to the deadline.

The new registrations push the total number of voters in Carmel — a town with an estimated population of 4,800 residents — to 4,142.

That means that about eight out of every 10 residents are registered to vote.

But the surge in voter registration has produced ominous charges of fraud. These rumors basically focus on concerns that businesspeople have illegally registered in order to vote in this key election. Another charge is that shopowners have been registering their employees, who live as far away as Marina or Seaside.

The League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula chose to investigate the validity of the new voters after it received reports of the alleged illegal registrations, according to President Lorita Fisher.

A league committee was scheduled to begin checking the downtown area voter registrations by March 17, but the county computer went down and the final roll was not available until March 18, Fisher explained.

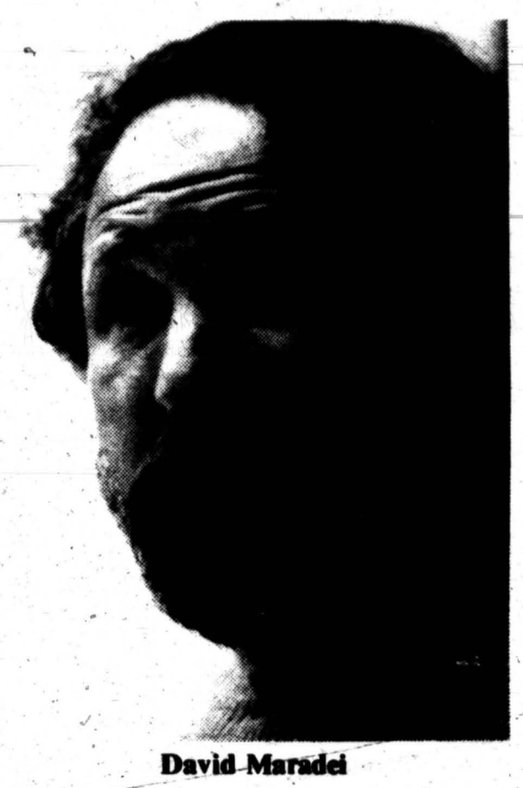

With the lists in hand as of Wednesday the league will first compare the claimed residency with details of the commercial district shops to see if anyone may be registered at a business or hotel.

Then if there are questions about certain voters the league will pay personal visits to the claimed address to verify the validity of the registration, Fisher said.

"I don't see us getting around to knocking on doors until Monday," she said.

Fisher stressed that the league is conducting the investigation as a "non-partisan" group only interested in seeing that registrations are proper.

To ensure that the investigation is impartial, the four women who will knock on doors Monday do not live in Carmel, she said.

David Maradei

Fisher continued, "We are happy to see people registering in an election. We are not going to question the motives of somebody registering. We just want them to be registered legally."

Fisher pointed out that the check by the league will serve a community purpose, even if no registration fraud is proven.

"If our little project does nothing more than raise consciousness we will have succeeded. We will also answer the rumors and I think that's a service to the community," she said.

Candidates get heard despite sound problems

Microphone problems throw glitch into works, but candidates get their points across

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A DOZEN Carmel City Council candidates tried to turn on the voters Tuesday night but a mischievous sound system kept trying to turn them off.

When the microphone was working in between high-piercing squeaks that sent hands over the ears of the more than 350 listeners, the candidates presented their views on a multitude of issues ranging from walking police patrols to parking to bathrooms.

The candidates forum at All Saints Episcopal Church was sponsored by the Carmel Citizens Committee before an overflow crowd of residents trying to learn who to vote for, a few tourists gawking at candidate and world-famous actor Clint Eastwood, and dozens of representatives of electronic news media all elbowing for the perfect "visual" of the cinema idol.

At one point a still photographer's radio-controlled lights suddenly went bonkers and the constant flashes created a psychedelic strobe light effect similar to disco dance floors for about 15 seconds.

Carmel Citizens Committee Chairman Robert Priestley moderated the two-hour forum, which featured a format of allowing the candidates three minutes to speak, followed by one-minute responses to written questions from the audience. The evening closed with two-minute remarks by each candidate.

There are four candidates seeking election to the two-year, $200 a month job as mayor of Carmel. They are incumbent Charlotte Townsend, Paul Laub, Tim Grady and Eastwood.

Another eight candidates seek election to the city council. There are two seats available for four-year terms. The candidates are: incumbents David Maradei and Robert Stephenson, and challengers Elinor Laiolo, Tom May, Robert Weber, Don Lampson, Bob Fischer and Anne Woolworth.

Following is a synopsis of the views expressed by each council candidate Tuesday.

Robert Stephenson

Stephenson, a building designer and four-decade Carmel resident, pressed that this council has kept development under control and has been fiscally responsible with just a 3 percent per year average increase in the city's budget over the past four years.

He said the city has been "chided" for filing lawsuits and commenting on issues outside municipal limits, but said it is imperative to control development otherwise it will be more difficult to put the brakes on inside the city.

STEPHENSON supports buying Mission Ranch and contends that any purchase would be made after full public hearings.

On the water issue, Stephenson said that the city has initiated many savings methods, including installation of a tank at the Del Mar spring to catch water for irrigation. In addition, the city is in the middle of a program of installing drip irrigation systems for water conservation.

Stephenson favors financially aiding the Carmel Youth Center and would like to see it incorporated into the city recreation program.

Anne Woolworth

Woolworth, a former member of the planning commission and general plan advisory committee, promises to keep any solutions to problems "in scale" with the character and uniqueness of Carmel.

Her concept of growth is "in-filling, replacement and repair."

Woolworth's platform is to keep the library at its present location, maintain resident-serving businesses, limit truck delivery hours to reduce congestion on streets, build a parking facility at Sunset Center and rethink the timed parking zones for better use.

She said she does not find Carmel council meetings "boring," but "rather riveting."

Robert Weber

Weber, a self-described environmental poet and member of the Environmentalist Party, spent his time pushing conservationist causes.

He said Californians have to recall Gov. George Deukmejian, Assemblyman Sam Farr and state Sen. Henry Mello because of their pro-development decisions.

If elected, Weber promised to work for environmental causes, and launch statewide efforts to make California a nuclear-free zone and push legislation banning offshore oil drilling.

On the local issues, Weber said he would remove the fence from the Carmel Beach banks and allow people to "freely" walk in the area. "I will legalize human footprints," he said.

Weber called Hatton Canyon "another Los Angeles freeway" that will "just pollute the environment."

Don Lampson

Lampson, a correctional officer at Soledad prison, said if he is elected the first thing he would do is "lighten up" what he feels is an oppressive atmosphere in city government.

LAMPSON SAID the current council makes big issues out of small ones.

For example, he said the city is worrying about a new library annex when it should be putting in a ramp so senior citizens can use the present facility.

Lampson favors cutting the four-year council terms in half "because people will not sit around and let years go by without getting anything done."

Lampson advocated an atmosphere of discussion and negotiation with the county and other agencies rather than taking legal action. "Lawsuits and lawyers have become a way of doing things."

On the public bathroom issue at Devendorf Park he said "I think it would be great to have a restroom party in the park" marking completion of the project.

Tom May

May, a personal finance asset manager and former city councilman, stressed four main points: "choking traffic, money waste, bad government and water conservation."

May said his record of public service shows a personal style that is "forward thinking, fair and decisive."

He said he has "practical experience" in money matters and promised to "build a sound, stable government respected by residents and businesspeople alike."

One of May's key proposals is to bring back local service trades through a program that includes additional parking and incentives.

The Sunset Center parking facility "is a reasonable first step," May said, adding that in conjunction with the new parking facility he would like to buy satellite parking lots throughout town.

May said he will be a long-range thinker. "I am not caught up with the national obsession for short-term answers."

May promised to bring back the "local ambiance" where most people knew each other and shopped at neighborhood stores.

David Maradei

Maradei, the Carmel Post Office station manager and four-year incumbent councilman, said the present council has brought "reasonable and responsive" government.

AMONG THE achievements, Maradei listed: a new staff, computerized city hall, a paigned on Spanish Bay" and that there had been "great difficulty in communicating with PBCSD. They have problems explaining their own goals." She added that the supervisors had not prohibited a sewage plant in Del Monte Forest but only at that site. Strasser Kauffman added that PBCSD's action in 1986 had invalidated their own permit.

The $12.7 million PBCSD plant, Roberts said, was a "gift" by virtue of its funding through Zone A and a "guaranteed source of water for the golf courses which would offset 600,000 gallons of potable water" now used for their irrigation.

Politics entered into the fray on three levels, Roberts said.

"Everyone knows that CSD has had a larger project at considerable cost. But the funding did not materialize for CSD and they had to do something with their design," Roberts said.

Roberts was referring to a $9 million Environmental Protection Agency grant CSD was denied in 1984 to build its $13 million plant. Donald Durant, current chairman of PBCSD, said that members of PBCSD board went to Washington D.C. to lobby against EPA funding the CSD project because they considered it too large and too costly. Durant added, however, he had always felt that the reclamation plant should be located at the CSD facility.

The Pebble Beach sewage district, which by contract treats one-third of its sewage at the CSD, proposed its own plant in Pebble Beach the same year as the CSD grant denial.

Acknowledging the "friction" between CSD and PBCSD, Roberts said that CSD "politically would rather see capital improvements under their (CSD) control rather than under PBCSD control" and opposed a smaller plant in Del Monte Forest.

The Dryden report contains a reference to the politicking surrounding the sewage plants and the Sawmill Gulch site.

The report states that the CSD plant "would avoid the issue of constructing either a plant or a reservoir at Sawmill Gulch. Regardless of the merits of that site, the political environment now surrounding it will be difficult to alter."

The politics involved includes what Roberts referred to as a "grass roots" opposition to the PBCSD reclamation plant and its accompanying reservoir. Residents of Del Monte Park in Pacific Grove, which borders the plant site, had formed together to oppose the plant.

The Dryden report, Roberts continued, verified the opinion of PBCSD engineers that the their plant would not produce noise or odors.

A third level of politics, Roberts continued, was that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District claimed it had jurisdiction over the distribution and creation of water and that the PBCSD plant would require a water district permit. Roberts said that PBCSD maintains it is not a water question but a disposal question. The water district and PBCSD are currently involved in a lawsuit to settle the dispute.

The Dryden report suggests that a 1.3 million gallons of sewage per day (mgd) capacity plant could be built for $11.3 million at the present CSD sewage treatment plant site. Production and amortized construction costs would set the total annual cost of the plant at about $1.3 million, according to the report.

Funding for the plant would come from a bond, backed either by the entire CSD district, Pebble Beach Co. or a combination of both, said Michael Zambory, general manager of CSD.

An 800,000 gallons-per-day PBCSD plant would cost approximately $12.6 million to build from the ground up with an annual cost estimated at $1.6 million, Dryden's report states. Cost to the average water user, however, would be zero.

Both plants would be able to provide the nearly 656 ac. ft. of water Pebble Beach golf courses require, but the CSD plant would produce more water that could be used in Pacific Grove for golf courses and a cemetery.

If Pebble Beach Co. would back a bond for the CSD plant as it did for PBCSD, the cost to peninsula users would be zero, the report said. If it does not, Dryden has estimated the cost would be about $37 per user annually. The reclaimed water would almost guarantee the company water for its golf courses even during a drought.

A joint powers authority involving peninsula-wide jurisdictions and agencies may be formed to finance the plant at CSD. If it is, the plant would be owned by the JPA and run by CSD, according Zambory.

"Let's at least just get something done," Durant said, adding that he is willing to listen to what the report and other districts have to say.

New tickets needed for discount taxi

ALL USERS of the Carmel Discount taxi service for the elderly and handicapped need to exchange their old tickets for new tickets.

New tickets went on sale Feb. 12 and all old tickets must be exchanged by March 31. No old tickets will be accepted by Carmel taxicab drivers after March 31, according to DeEtta Greenwalt, Monterey County transit coordinator.

To exchange the old tickets for the new ones mail the old tickets to: County Transit Coordinator, 312 East Alisal, Salinas CA 93901.

Greenwalt said the old ticket books sold for $10 each and contained 10 one-way ride tickets. The new ticket books sell for $3 each and contain 10 $1 coupons to be used when paying the taxi fare.

With the new coupon books if the fare is $3.75, the passenger gives the driver three $1 coupons, plus 75 cents of the passenger's own cash. The coupons may only be used to pay the taxi fare and may not be used for the tip. An eligible user must also have a valid handicapped transit courtesy card issued by Greenwalt's office.

The taxicab service is for Carmel residents who have difficulty walking or are unable to walk to a bus stop. Passengers may go to any point within the city, or outside the city to Carmel Point, Carmel Rancho, Community Hospital, Monterey and Pacific Grove. Trips to Monterey and Pacific Grove are limited to health-related trips. There are no restrictions on other destinations.

To call a taxi call Carmel-by-the-Sea Taxi at 624-3885, then tell the taxi dispatcher: Your name and Handicapped Transit Courtesy Card Valid Thru Date; trip date and time; pick-up address and trip destination.

For more information contact the county transit coordinator in Salinas at 394-7055.

sound fiscal policy, the beach restoration project, resolution of the library annex issue, plans for restrooms at Piccadilly Park, maintenance of municipal facilities and a successful recreation program for youngsters.

On the closing of the Pebble Beach access gate, Maradei pointed out that by just talking about the possibility the council prompted the company to open another entrance lane on weekends, add signs to encourage visitors to exit out the Carmel Hill gate, tour buses aren't allowed to use the gate and the entry will be relocated 50 yards farther into Del Monte Forest.

On the dam issue, Maradei said the council delayed entering an assessment district to make sure that the city will receive a fair allocation or Carmel won't pay for the development.

Maradei added that the city has "never" spent money in private and promised that any final offer to buy Mission Ranch would be discussed in public.

Elinor Laiolo

Laiolo, a former public school administrator and wife of former Mayor Barney Laiolo, questioned the senior citizen housing project.

She asked why a project that costs $700,000 for the land alone is considered "low cost."

She charged that the city has spent a "tremendous" amount of money on unnecessary consultants and for legal fees.

"I feel they have been exorbitant and they have not accomplished what they should have accomplished," she said.

Laiolo promised that the council and staff will treat people "in a human manner" and she will bring back the Pledge of Allegiance to be recited before each meeting.

Citizens overwhelmingly supported a parking facility at Sunset Center but no action has been taken, she said.

"I don't see the parking facility that was the request of the community," Laiolo said.

The council's refusal to join in an assessment district for the dam "does not keep our needs into consideration," she added.

Bob Fischer

Bob Fischer is a former assistant police chief who promised to get the officers "out of their metal coccoons" and walking the streets in the commercial and residential zone.

He called the council "boring," questioned the validity of a beach walkway plan that will remove 54 parking spaces from Scenic Road, and supported buying Mission Ranch only after public hearings.

He said he was at one meeting where it took more than an hour for an applicant to get his sign approved even though the city attorney said the sign was legal and had to be approved.

Fischer proposes that voters reject the three incumbents.

"Let's take a new broom and let's get some new people in there from the top on down."

Charlotte Townsend

The incumbent mayor was soundly booed when she referred to Eastwood as a disgruntled developer and questioned why her opponents have not been previously involved in city government.

The mayor asked that voters consider her record, saying that "my opponents are floundering around looking for issues, when there is really only one overriding issue.

"That issue is city government, by residents or by business expansionists. Neighborhood protection versus creeping development."

The mayor promised to preserve Carmel as a residential village and said that a vote for her is a vote for the neighborhoods.

She also pointed out that she started the ad hoc committee that brings together business and residents for discussions of mutual concerns.

On the dam issue, Townsend said she wants to ensure that the citizens have all the facts before being asked to vote on the proposal.

The mayor said that the city water conservation ordinance has been a "model" law that has been copied by other municipalities.

She reminded the citizens that the past council abandoned the public restroom concept for Devendorf Park and it was a former council that banned frisbees there.

The mayor said the city gives free bus passes to its employees and suggested that if businesses followed suit the parking problem could be somewhat eased.

Clint Eastwood

Eastwood, making his first bid for public office, promised to drop the lawsuits against the Odellos, which was greeted with a loud round of applause.

He stressed negotiation and compromise instead of lawsuits, saying he would vote to abandon the legal action against Mission Ranch and Spanish Bay as well.

He said he would build the Sunset Center parking facility, join the Holman Highway Task Force, provide restrooms at Piccadilly Park and use local consultants rather than spending taxpayers' money for outside consultant fees.

Eastwood said he would vote to join in the dam assessment program, meet with the library board to solve the space problem, instill a new mood of cooperation between residents and businesses, and help the financially-strapped Carmel Youth Center.

EASTWOOD ADDED that he would not have "the nerve" to ask voters to re-elect him if he did not accomplish his goals.

"It's either this time or nothing at all."

Paul Laub

Laub, a local businessman, responded to questions about his candidacy since he moved to town a month before the filing deadline.

He said election law is set up so that it favors where you sleep rather than where your concerns lie.

"Being in business doesn't preclude one from being interested in the town."

Laub chastized the city for its failure to address the parking problem. "What are they going to do when the pope comes?" he questioned.

If elected, Laub promised to: bring "compassion" back to city hall, provide parking (especially handicapped) for the Carmel Foundation, build a parking facility at Sunset Center, try and buy the Hodges property for a satellite parking lot with accompanying shuttle bus, and help the youth center.

He also promised to maintain the sidewalks, start an emergency aid program for seniors, build public restrooms and clean up suspected drug dealing at the beach and park.

Tim Grady

Grady is the Environmentalist Party candidate for mayor.

Grady took a more philosophical overall view, "One cannot serve two masters. One must decide whether we will serve our lust for material gain or open our hearts to the mystery of life and our place in it," he said.

Grady used his time to protest the Spanish Bay development and call the proposed federalization of Big Sur another "noose around our 'free' necks...Every wild creature is on the gallows."

Grady said capital expenditures for "beautification projects" (tree trimming, the beach rehabilitation project) are "unnecessary" and "unacceptable."

He favors a public vote on all issues of development.

Grady called Carmel's problems a "microcosm" of the world and asked that citizens look toward a more global view of the environment and the future.

Holman Highway

Hwy 68 safety topic of public workshop

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHAT IS the best method to improve safety on the much-traveled Holman Highway given the need to keep traffic flowing to ease congestion and also face up to today's budget realities?

That is the key question to be discussed at a special workshop next week focusing on safety improvements to Holman Highway connecting Pacific Grove to Highway 1 at Carmel Hill.

The workshop, sponsored by the Holman Highway Task Force, will be from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday, March 27 at the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

The year-old Holman Highway Task Force has financed a $35,000 study to calculate traffic patterns and develop proposed safety improvements for Holman Highway.

Another task was to analyze likely funding sources to finance any improvements to Holman Highway, which is also known as Highway 68. Another stretch of Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas is not part of the discussion.

The task force was formed out of the concerns generated by development of the Spanish Bay resort project, which is expected to add even more cars to an already-congested highway.

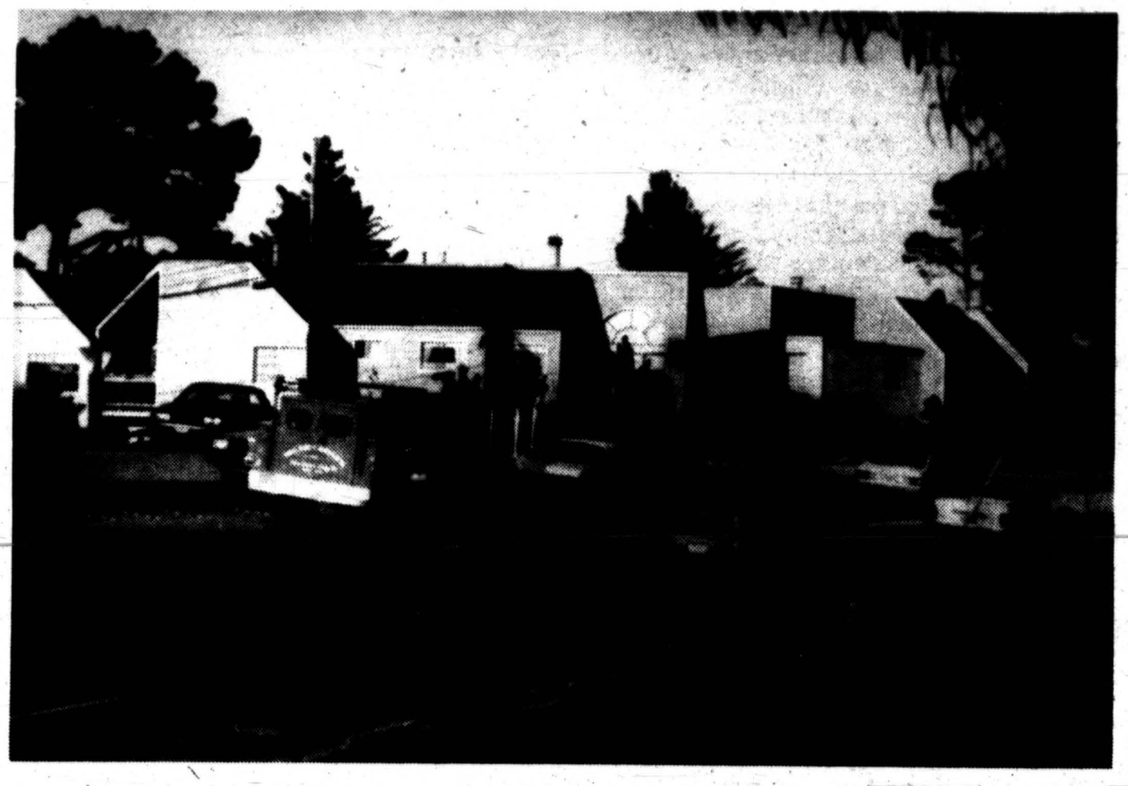

"We decided to look at everything from soup to nuts," is how task force Chairwoman Susan Whitman of Pacific Grove described the purpose of the report prepared by Larry Seeman and Associates.

Whitman said that traffic problems have been steadily increasing on Highway 68 and that Spanish Bay "was just the straw that broke the camel's back."

Among the founders of Holman Highway Task Force, which she describes as a "public-private partnership," are representatives of the cities of Pacific Grove and Monterey, Monterey County, the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), Asilomar Conference Center, Pebble Beach Corp., the U.S. Army, the California Department of Forestry, the California Department of Transportation and Community Hospital.

The city of Carmel chose not to join the task force because, as mayor Charlotte Townsend said, its work parallels the studies being conducted by the county as part of a large-scale "origin and destination" traffic study.

The Carmel City Council just recently allocated approximately $6,000 to help pay for the origin and transportation study, which encompasses the entire Monterey Peninsula rather than focusing on Holman Highway, the mayor said.

TRAFFIC WHIZZES by entering Pacific Grove on Holman Highway. A special task force will conduct a public meeting on proposed improvements to Holman Highway between Carmel and Pacific Grove from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday, March 27 at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. (Holly McFarland photo.)

THE WORKSHOP was scheduled to give the general public an opportunity to review the traffic data and make suggestions on the various proposed improvements to the highway, Whitman said.

The common proposals range from adding shoulders for emergencies ("The simplest and cheapest," Whitman said.) to adding passing lanes to re-configuring the entire highway.

Another plan to be discussed at the meeting is whether to abandon the proposed new Pebble Beach access gate and signal light near Haul Road. The gate is a condition of the California Coastal Commission permit for the Spanish Bay resort in Pebble Beach.

"We want to look at it. We want to be able to talk about it," Whitman said of the gate proposal. "The public has never been asked...It all came from agencies."

The task force has discussed the merits of the new gate and signal light and concluded that "it could cause more problems than it would ever relieve," said Whitman, who is also a Pacific Grove City Councilwoman and a member of that city's chamber of commerce.

"Maybe a separated grade would be bet-

BEHIND THE LINES
BY MICHAEL GARDNER

TV's one-upsmanship

LOCAL TELEVISION stations, which in the past found Carmel about as exciting as covering a garden club tea, suddenly have found a media god.

His name is Clint Eastwood, such a sure-fire winner in the ratings that both local television stations have arranged for Carmel mayoral campaign forums to be aired on prime time.

Demonstrating some one-upmanship, KSBW-TV (NBC, Channel 8) got a jump in the televised forums by scheduling a live one-hour forum from 8 to 9 p.m. Saturday, March 29.

It replaces in the schedule the half-hour comedies(?) Gimme a Break and The Facts of Life. (Of course, if any of the challengers are elected I can see them yelling "Gimme A Break" when they learn the "Facts of Life" at city hall.) Bad attempt at puns.

If you don't have a VCR or blank tape in the house, not to worry even if you can't tune in Saturday night.

Rival KMST (CBS, Channel 46), which was the first to announce a forum only to suddenly find itself two days behind KSBW in scheduling, will carry a taped session from 9 to 10 p.m., Monday, March 31.

Both events will feature opening remarks by the four mayoral candidates: incumbent Charlotte Townsend, challengers Paul Laub and Tim Grady, and of course Eastwood.

Each candidate also will be questioned by a panel of journalists, including the Pine Cone's Publisher Bill Brown (KSBW) and Managing Editor Mac McDonald (KMST).

Wanna bet whether the forums would be in prime time or Sunday at 6:30 a.m. if the election was without Eastwood?

AND DON'T FORGET!

For those of us interested in the "other" race, which is just as important, seeing as how two seats are at stake, don't forget about the council candidates' forum from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Wednesday, March 26 in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center.

Thanks to the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula for offering a forum featuring only council candidates, so they can perhaps get their views across without the hoopla of the mayor's race.

The council candidates are: incumbents David Maradei and Robert Stephenson, challengers Robert Weber, Don Lampson, Elinor Laiolo, Bob Fischer, Tom May and Anne Woolworth.

BUMPER SNICKERS

Is it news that entrepreneurs are capitalizing on the election with buttons like "Promise me anything, but give me Clint for mayor," or my favorite, and a rarity, a bumper sticker stating "Go ahead make me mayor"?

BUT I think that a chutzpah award has to be given to the prankster last seen at Friar Tuck's.

According to our sources, Station Manager David Maradei parked his Honda in front of the post office early one a.m. last week.

Someone who's awake long before we are slipped out from the coffee counter and placed a "Bob Fischer for council" bumper sticker on Maradei's car.

Apparently, the unsuspecting Maradei then returned and loaded a box into the hatchback, his knees pushing against the bumper and sticker plugging his rival.

Soon, off went the Honda telling the whole world to vote for Fischer. Footnote: at last peek the bumper was clean.

HEALTH FOOD POTATO CHIPS

Mayoral candidate Grady, a member of the Environmentalist Party who thinks of himself as another Euell Gibbons, would want you to believe that all he does is chew on carrot sticks and munch trail mix.

But now for the real scoop! At Grady's "tea party" last week, guests were treated to an hors d'oeuvres buffet of barbecued chicken, cookies, and Tim's favorite, O'Grady's potato chips.

And what about the purified water Grady espouses? Well, it couldn't have been found at the party. Guests were offered sparkling apple cider, wine and Budweiser beer.

So much for the granola generation.

THE CLINT WATCH

"Just call me Eric Dickerson."

Eastwood may have made a mistake recently by actually putting in a personal appearance at his campaign headquarters on San Carlos Street.

Tourists flocking there for Clint memorabilia (there are none) gasped when they saw their screen idol actually inside.

Getting ready to go, Eastwood spotted the hordes outside. This is when maybe Eastwood started flashing back to an old movie.

The candidate lurched back against the wall and threw his arms up as if he were one of the punks captured by Dirty Harry.

Suddenly, Eastwood, probably mistaking the tourists for the Miami "Killer B's" defense, put on his Eric Dickerson act and ran straight out the door, on the way to a touchdown. But in this case it wasn't the goal line; he was racing to his car across the street.

Safe inside, he sped away, leaving the Killer B's in their tracks. Score: Clint 6, Tourists, 0.

COFFEE BREAK WITH CLINT

Now you can take a coffee break with Clint and help a good cause at the same time.

Dorothea Roberts over at Casa Dolores Gallery in Carmel Plaza is selling "Clint for Mayor" coffee cups.

Out of the $5 purchase price, $1.50 will be donated to the Carmel Youth Center, according to Roberts.

The coffee cup was Phyllis Howard's idea. She got a few made and soon everyone wanted one. So even more were made and they are being sold at the gallery.

"CLINT FOR MAYOR" coffee cups can be found in Dorothea Roberts' (left) Casa Dolores Gallery in Carmel Plaza. The cups, the idea of Phyllis Howard (right) are sold with a good cause in mind. For each $5 cup, $1.50 will be donated to the Carmel Youth Center. (Michael Gardner photo.)

FRAN LIBBY and son Lance make their way across Rosie's Bridge, which she says is unsafe and needs to be replaced. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Carmel Valley residents await funding for bridge

By MICHAEL GARDNER

FRAN LIBBY takes the hand of her three-year-old son and guides him precariously between the speeding traffic and the guardrail protecting one from falling into the raging Carmel River below.

"It might be my son going fishing one day and I might not see him again," Libby says near the bridge that she wants the county to replace.

Libby and many other residents of the Robles neighborhood in Carmel Valley are awaiting word from the county whether its application for federal funds to replace Rosie's Bridge has been accepted.

The county expects to know by May whether the grant will be awarded to build a new bridge consisting of two 16-foot lanes and a five-foot walkway for pedestrians.

The project is expected to cost approximately $1 million with 80 percent paid by the federal grant.

Two-thirds of the approximately 50 residents attending a special meeting recently indicated their support of plans to replace Rosie's Bridge, which they say is unsafe because of the large numbers of cars that cross it each day, the lack of a separated pedestrian walkway, and the steel surface that causes vehicles to lose traction upon acceleration or braking.

The bridge is the only access to Carmel Valley Road available to the Robles neighborhood residents.

"If you want your thrills try to walk to town," Libby said.

Each day 3,400 cars pass over the bridge not to mention "the kids, the dogs, the bicycles or the horses," said Libby, who has lived in the area for 19 years.

Libby acknowledges that one of the major problems is driver speed, and not the bridge. If drivers slowed there wouldn't be as much danger. But she points out that the "if" is mighty big.

"You can't live on ifs. If you have a five-year-old on the way to school you don't want to think 'if they drive good there is no danger,' " Libby countered.

Libby said she has written numerous letters over the past 15 years about the dangers of the bridge, but in the past all she received in reply is that there are not enough accidents there to warrant the cost.

"How many people have to be killed before we get a new bridge?" she said in a statement tragically familiar to the Highway 68 problems. It took the death of two York School students to force some improvements in the well-traveled highway near the school.

THE BRIDGE also poses a danger to drivers, Libby said.

The steel cannot hold tires, so if a driver accelerates or brakes on the bridge there is a danger of losing control, she said.

At one time Libby thought a less expensive solution would be to resurface the bridge and add a pedestrian crossing for about $300,000.

But with the federal grant, the county can have a wide bridge and separated walkway and still spend only $300,000.

She scoffs at those who claim that the federal money should not be spent. "It's already here. They've given it to the county. If we don't use it then North County will get a new bridge," she said.

In addition, a wider bridge would help residents cross the river in the event of a major disaster, Libby said.

Just last month an accident tied traffic on the bridge "all the way up to Valley road," she said.

Stu Clough, who operates Stu's Plumbing out of the former Rosie's Cracker Barrel grocery store about 50 yards from the bridge, also supports replacing Rosie's Bridge.

He agrees with Libby's assessments and added that one of the common dangers is posed to southbound drivers following a car that is turning left onto Del Rio.

Clough said locals who know the bridge will veer to a large shoulder on the west side rather than try to brake on the steel surface.

Traffic safety on Hwy 68 to be topic of workshop ter, but in reality we're talking big bucks for that," she said.

A big question that has to be answered is how to make the road safe but still keep traffic flowing to ease congestion, Whitman explained.

"Is safety number one or is convenience number one?" is her rhetorical question.

"Do you want to be able to zip along that road or do you want to make it safe?"

Zipping along is exactly the norm on Holman Highway, which has experienced an average 2.7 percent yearly traffic increase since 1971, according to the task force.

"An increase in traffic on the Holman Highway of 31 percent in 10 years would result in stop-and-go conditions (level of service F) for 10 hours a day in the year 1995 if no improvements are made," states the task force report.

Parts of Holman Highway already are rated at Level F (stop and go) by CalTrans.

One of the key safety concerns is how to get ambulances to Community Hospital without life-threatening delays.

"Approximately 240 emergency-related ambulance trips to the hospital are made each month along the Holman Highway according to the local ambulance company," the task force report states.

The origin of the ambulance trips is split about evenly between north Pacific Grove and Highway 1 portions of the highway.

ON ANOTHER safety issue, the task force reports that "the accident rate on Holman Highway is equal to the state average for all roads and is lower than expected for similar roadways throughout the state."

The majority of the accidents, the report indicates, occur between Skyline Drive and the hospital.

According to the task force, "nine major alternatives were considered, as well as several short-range improvements."

"The short-range improvements include the limitation of construction truck traffic along the highway to non-peak hours, maintenance of the graded shoulder in the vicinity of the Haul Road entrance as a climbing lane for trucks and signing of this section to prohibit parking, establishment of an intensive ridesharing program, and an analysis of ridership and routing of transit service to assure adequate service along the highway."

Funding sources recommended by the committee include Monterey County federal urban aid funds, local gas taxes, state highway funds, transportation development act monies and military subventions.

City treasurer resigns so she can support Clint

AS THE Carmel City Council election campaign progressed, City Treasurer Sandy Skillicorn found herself in a dilemma.

As an appointee to the $150 monthly job, Skillicorn felt she had some allegiance to the present council and Mayor Charlotte Townsend.

However, Skillicorn also wants to support Clint Eastwood for mayor and does not favor the re-election of incumbent councilmen Robert Stephenson and David Maradei.

So Skillicorn has done what she believes to be the only honorable thing — she has resigned from her position that she has held for a little more than three years.

"As a member of the business community I feel that it is important that I be able to speak out and support the candidates I feel will have the most to offer the city with its current needs and available choices," Skillicorn said in her letter of resignation dated March 18.

"Since I do not feel free to do this in an appointed position, I must resign," continued Skillicorn, who plans to campaign for Eastwood even though she and her husband, Jack, do not live within the city limits.

"I just didn't feel right about it," Skillicorn told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"As far as I'm concerned I see a number of candidates who would make good replacements and make it possible for the council as a whole to take a fresh direction," she said.

Skillicorn said that normally she does not become involved in political affairs.

"I'm not a politican and I mostly stay out of politics. I just see this as an opportunity and we need to take this opportunity," she explained.

"I feel that this is an important opportunity for Carmel and I'm not ready to keep quiet. This is not the time one can keep quiet," Skillicorn continued.

Skillicorn added that she is not bowing out because of any pressure from city hall about her siding with Eastwood.

"No one has ever brought that up," she said.

CHALK MARKS

A gift that lasts a lifetime

By Joe Feldeisen
Carmel High School principal

A great deal of attention is afforded Carmel High School students who participate in athletics, drama and other extracurricular activities.

They are given medals, certificates, letters, banquets, and much deserved attention by the media. By the time these students graduate from Carmel High, they usually have many honors and awards.

However, the students who do not participate in these and similar activities often receive little recognition. Indeed, most students complete their academic studies with no honors, awards or celebration other than the graduation ceremony.

The purpose of our school is learning, and learning is part of the ordinary environment at Carmel. That doesn't always make it newsworthy, even though learning is always good news. We as parents would do well to remember that learning is its own honor and reward. It is more important than any certificate, medal or news coverage that students might receive. Once we learn something, no one can take it away from us, and we can benefit from it all of our lives. That is a true honor and a real reward.

The certificates, medals and letters a student receives are packed away. The banquets are soon forgotten, and what seems important at the moment fast loses any real significance. Our learning, however, is not put away. We carry it with us at all times. It is available for use 24 hours a day, every day of the year.

As parents, we are sometimes upset that so much attention is paid to the extracurricular successes of students, while so little is given to academic achievement. It is a characteristic of human society to honor those who entertain us and amuse us, more than those who labor day after day to keep civilization on course. That reality should not disturb us. It is much more important that we, as parents, honor our children for their academic achievements in school.

The most significant adults in any child's life are his or her parents. If we cherish learning for ourselves and our children, and if we praise our children for their learning successes, we bestow upon them the greatest honor and the finest award.

This may be our greatest obligation as parents. As an administrator in one of the finest academic high schools in California, I beg you to become more involved in your students' education. The reward is a gift that lasts a lifetime.

Parents involved at CMS

By FRANK LYNCH
Principal, Carmel Middle School

Recent research cites parent involvement in a child's education as being the "singularly most important factor" in a student's efforts to learn and be successful.

I think that this is a little over-stated, but not much. I view the cooperative effort of the parent and the teacher as the model for motivating and inspiring a child to learn.

Our CMS parents take an active role in both the education of their own child, and also in the well-being of the rest of the school. We have parents who drive, chaperone, fund raise, fingerprint children and help in the office.

These parents volunteer their services through the CMS Parent Faculty Club. This organization is the focal point for gathering parent input towards the well-being of the school and for providing financial and moral support for both the staff and the students.

I know for a fact that over the past five years, activities, programs and equipment would not have been purchased or taken place without the direct support of our Parent Faculty Club.

The staff, administration and students of Carmel Middle School salute our parent club members and other parents who have been such a tremendous source of energy, who have given unselfishly of their time and money, and, who, most importantly, have given us their children to instruct and befriend.

City takes a hard look at Sunset Center parking

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council — in its second-to-last official meeting before the April 8 election — has begun to seriously look at the viability of a parking facility at Sunset Center.

The council, in a special study session March 15, was presented with an hour-long talk on how the Monterey parking garages and free shuttle service are managed.

Additionally, another hour was spent with Wilbur Smith and Associates on a preview of a traffic survey results as part of the master environmental assessment program now underway.

The city for years has considered the idea of a multi-level parking facility at Sunset Center, which would carry an estimated price tag of $5 million depending on how many levels are developed, what is built on top and how much expense is afforded to soften the architecture.

Opening the Saturday morning discussion was Carl Anderson of the city of Monterey.

Right off Anderson pointed out that "what might be right for the city of Monterey is not necessarily right for Carmel."

Most of Anderson's talk focused on the two Custom House above-ground parking facilities that total more than 1,000 spaces.

One of the questions posed by the city asked for the best methods of collecting fees if Carmel chooses to charge for parking.

Anderson recommends an attendant rather than parking meters for the garage.

Monterey has found that a booth with an attendant is "far superior" to meters, he said.

The attendant adds a "human factor" to the garage for providing security and information to parkers, Anderson explained.

Anderson called meters "costly to purchase and maintain...People love to put anything under the sun in a parking meter...Parking meters also have a very negative image."

However, Anderson did say that the meters — especially on Cannery Row at 50 cents per hour — "generate an extraordinary amount of revenue."

Another issue in Carmel is how to allocate spaces in the garage if one is constructed. The question is whether business commuters would pay to park in the facility.

Anderson said the city of Monterey does not lease or assign any specific parking slots in the Custom House garages.

INSTEAD, the city issues commuters a card that costs $10 monthly.

The card can be inserted into a special gate and employees can park in the garage on a first-come, first-serve basis. A sophisticated computer in the garage records data from the parkers and prevents swapping cards by not allowing entry if the vehicle has not checked out of the garage, Anderson said.

"I don't even have a parking space. I catch what's available," he said.

The fees have been purposely kept low recently to encourage use of the facility. Soon, the monthly fees will be increased, Anderson indicated.

When the shuttle bus is not operating, it costs only 50 cents to park in the garage. When the free shuttle bus is available, the all day fee is increased to $3.

In the west Custom House garage, the city has installed meters on the first level "at the request of the merchants," who see short-term parking as a benefit to their customers.

The top three levels are on a first-come, first-serve basis with access through a gate. Parkers pay an attendant upon exiting.

Overall, the city receives $3 million in revenues from all of its parking facilities, Anderson said.

Cost of a parking structure was also discussed by Anderson, who pointed out that a final price tag depends on size, architectural design and land costs.

The least expensive is a "pre-fabricated" structure that costs approximately $6,000 to $7,000 per parking space. An example of a pre-fabricated parking garage is the facility constructed for the Mervyn's department store in Del Monte Center, Anderson said.

However, Anderson said the city of Monterey does not like the pre-fabricated facilities, nor would Carmel.

"It's something you would find in San Jose. You would not want that structure in Carmel," he said.

Soil conditions and whether the facility is to be developed underground can add to costs.

"A below-grade facility is very expensive in ongoing operations because it has to be vented," Anderson said.

One of Anderson's "horror stories" revolves around the 110-space lot at Foam and David. There the city found significant 40,000 year-old remains of American Indians. That facility — because of the archeological excavation costs — was built at $22,000 per parking space.

ANDERSON ALSO recommended against phasing a project.

One stumbling block to phasing is changes to the building codes, especially concerning earthquake standards, he said.

TO HARBOR THE BIRDS

One of the charms of Carmel and vicinity is undoubtedly that afforded by the large number of permanent and transitory birds that make their habitat here.

It seems incumbent upon every resident and organization to assist in the effort now being made by the local bird club to have established in this territory by legislative enactment a game sanctuary.

There are in California several such sanctuaries, but none in this vicinity. Of all places where such protection as these harbors afford, Carmel is certainly a most desirable and ideal location.

Any information, pro and con, concerning this matter will be welcomed by the Secretary of the Carmel Bird Club.

RESPIRATOR GIFT TO COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Gift of a Drinker respirator for Peninsula Community Hospital has been received with great satisfaction by the board of directors. W.W. Powell, president of the board, was here from Los Angeles last Friday and Saturday, and expressed himself well pleased with the condition of the hospital, with one serious problem, however, demanding immediate attention of the board.

For more than a month the hospital has been operating at capacity, and extra beds are needed. It is felt that the time is approaching when a nurses' home will have to be built in the hospital grounds, in order to release the extra beds now occupied by the nurses. Ways and means to raise the necessary funds are now being considered by the board.

COUNCIL BARKS, GROWLS AT CARMEL DOGS BUT PUTS NO BITE IN ORDINANCE

The dog situation remains approximately unchanged in Carmel after an airing before the city council last night during which councilmen and city officials expressed their opinions in tones which occasionally sounded suspiciously like barks, snaps and growls.

Councilman Francis Whitaker proposed that an amendment be added to the existing dog nuisance ordinance which would further protect residents of areas without curbs and sidewalks from dog walkers who continually bring their animals to the same curbless spots and soon pollute them. But the proposal lost out when Councilmen Eben Whittlesey and John Chitwood voted no and Mayor Frank Putnam declared the motion defeated.

BAY SCHOOL DEMOLITION BECOMES REALITY

After years of controversy and a split vote of three in favor, one against and one abstention, the Carmel Unified District school board voted to demolish and rebuild Bay School.

The project had been approved unanimously by the board last year, but litigation pressed by the late Tom Hudson held the project up. Earlier this year the suit brought by Hudson in the name of E.J. Sullivan was dismissed, clearing the way for the project to begin.

Demolition was carried out by employees of the school district and the bid for replication of Bay School went to Tombleson, Inc. for $81,875. The district has already spent over $10,000 on the project and is holding $79,211 for construction. In addition, the dismissed suit could result in the district receiving up to $10,000 in settlement.

PARK PLANS ARE OFFERED

The goal of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club is to see the controversial Piccadilly Nursery site on Dolores maintained as a "green garden, a resting area in the middle of a busy block of shops and restaurants."

So determined to see it happen, the 25-member group footed the expense for hiring a landscape architect, James B. Ransohoff and Associates, to render preliminary sketches for converting the Piccadilly site into a vest pocket park.

According to Carol Stratton, vice president of the club, the plans are offered "only to assist the city council to visualize a potential beauty spot where this property now lies unsightly, untended and unloved.

"We feel that creation of a green area here would relieve the density of the commercial, tourist-oriented surroundings while providing our residents with a strategically-placed meeting spot in the Carmel tradition."

Red Cross institutes toll-free number

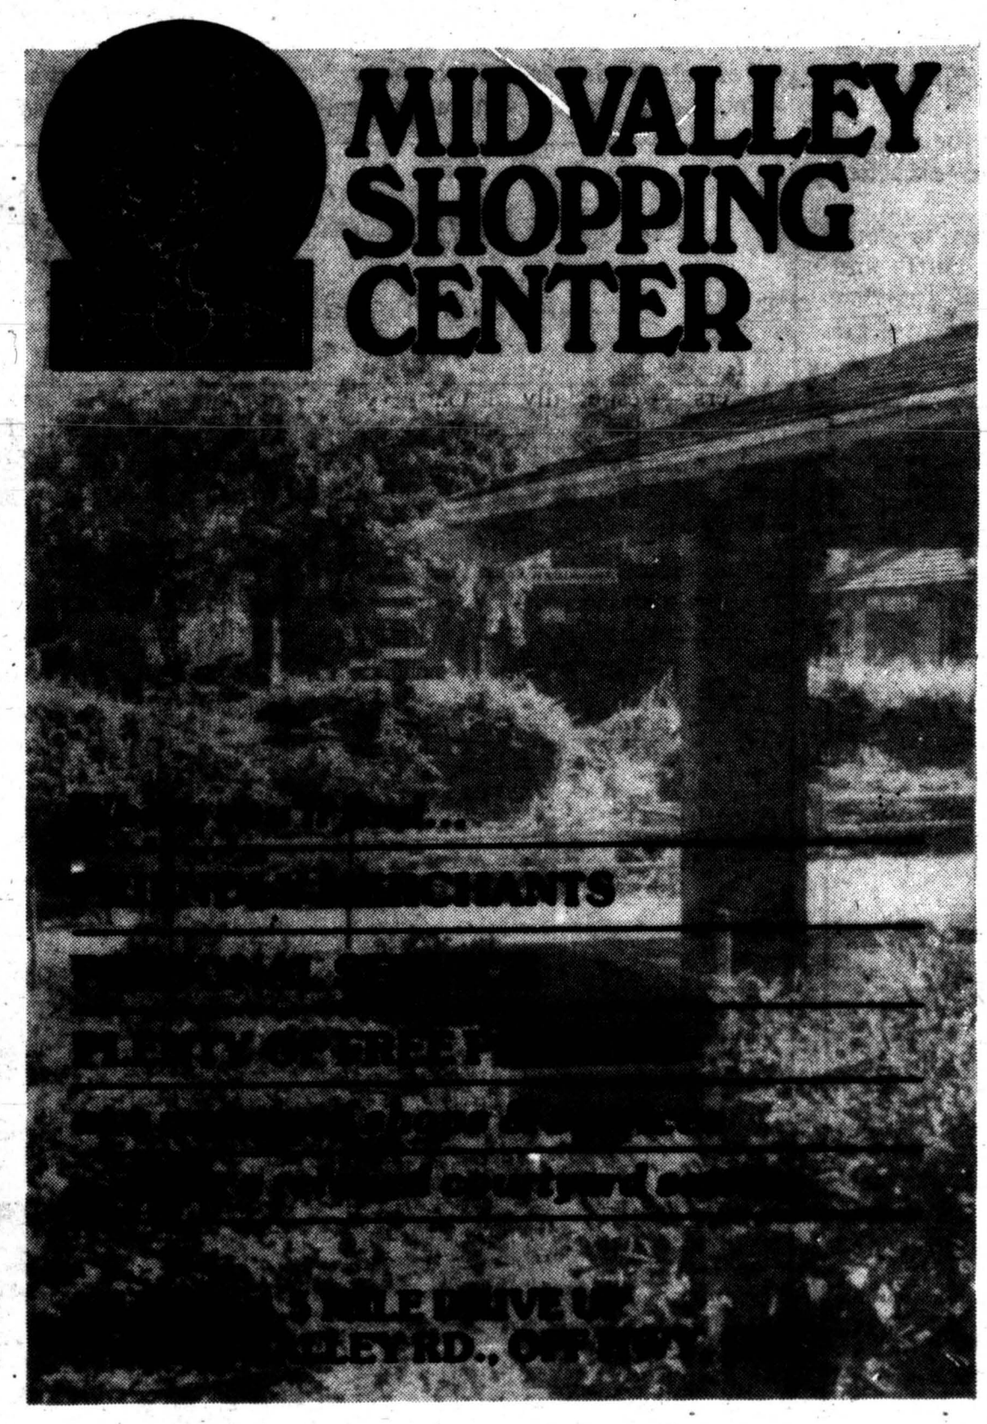

The Red Cross has instituted a toll-free number for people who want to help storm disaster victims by donating money or pledging a gift.

The number is 1-800-453-9000. People may also send contributions to the Carmel-by-the-Sea chapter at P.O. Box AR, Carmel 93921, in care of "Emergency Disaster Relief Campaign."

Red Cross officials anticipate spending more than $3 million for relief efforts. More than 16 shelters have been opened to serve 46,000 meals to victims and emergency workers since the start of the disaster flooding.

The Red Cross has 910 staff and volunteers working on the relief effort. Twenty-nine California counties have reported floods.

Council takes hard look at Sunset Center parking

The city of San Jose had to redo an entire parking facility originally planned to have phased additions because of changes in the earthquake standards.

On the security issue, Anderson said at one time Monterey hired a private firm to patrol the parking garages.

But the private firm did not work out and the city since has hired its own part-time workers to patrol the garage.

"I am very pleased to say we have had no theft, no vandalism, at least no reported problems," Anderson said.

A key to a successful parking garage is that it appears safe, starting with the attendant rather than parking meters, he said.

Anderson recommended that any facility include a security patrol, good lighting, glass elevators for visibility and be kept clean.

Other security devices available but not used by Monterey include television monitors and a sound system so that the attendant can hear any problems.

"I don't think we're to that point," he said.

Anderson especially pushed for the glass elevators. "There's nothing more scary than stepping into an elevator and finding somebody standing there who doesn't look inviting."

Anderson added that streets surrounding the garage are good places for tour bus parking.

And a parking facility also lessens the traffic congestion because drivers will just go straight to the garage rather than circle blocks looking for a place to park.

Speaking of the free shuttle bus, Anderson said, "If we've done anything right, I think it's our shuttle bus."

The shuttle bus operated by Monterey-Salinas Transit picks up passengers at the Custom House garage and takes them to the Monterey Bay Aquarium on Cannery Row.

The service costs $34 per hour for each bus and between one and five buses operate depending on demand.

The service has cost $180,000 annually and revenues have totaled $136,000. The aquarium and city divide the $44,000 shortfall, Anderson said.

The bus currently operates from 9:30 a.m. until 6:30 p.m., but there is a proposal to extend the service until 10 p.m. so visitors can stay and have dinner on Cannery Row without worrying about catching the shuttle back to downtown, Anderson said.

THE EVENTUAL plan is to make Monterey a "one park city" where visitors only have to park their cars once and can take the shuttle service throughout the town, Anderson said.

This Saturday will mark the first anniversary of the free shuttle bus, which has carried about 450,000 riders since its inception.

In a separate matter, the council also received a preliminary report on the parking survey conducted by Wilbur Smith and Associates.

The parking study is part of the overall master environmental assessment, which when completed, will help guide Carmel building into the next century.

The overall survey cost the city $50,000. The parking survey, which is still being completed, was allocated $20,000 of that budget.

The final data, which will be presented to the council at a later date, also will be incorporated as part of the environmental impact report for the master environmental assessment.

The data also would be required as part of any EIR for a Sunset Center parking facility.

According to the preliminary data, there are 3,378 parking spaces in the commercial districts of town, of which 2,056 are on-street.

The survey indicated that in the central commercial zone, total demand exceeded supply by about 250 spaces.

When the final data gathering is completed, the contract firm Denise Duffy and Associates of Monterey will put together recommendations for programs and projects which are called "action plans."

Song spoofing election gets some heavy airplay

They outlawed neon light
You get life for an electric guitar
just oil paintings and T-shirt shops
And one big shining star

By MAC McDONALD

FIRST THERE was The Announcement, then The Candidate and The Campaign, followed by The Bumpersticker, The Button and The Coffee Cup. Now, there's...The Song.

Yes, in this closely-watched and hyped-up election campaign for Mayor of Carmel there had to be a song about Clint Eastwood and his candidacy, and who else to do it but some local boys.

The Flys (formerly the Medflys, although all that could probably change again), a Monterey Peninsula-based rock band, has just recorded a tongue-in-cheek song about Eastwood entitled "Don't Mess With the Mayor," obviously taking liberties with the title since election day isn't until April 8.

The song is being heavily requested at KMBY-FM, a local rock-oriented radio station, and most of the nation's news media have picked up on it. The Flys, meanwhile, are having a ball.

"It's got a good beat, it's easy to dance to...I'd give it a 98!" laughed lead singer Carl Christ, who wrote the lyrics. Fellow bandmember, guitarist-keyboardist Dale Kurokawa wrote the music. "It's a fun project. Someone eles would have done it if we hadn't. I'm a big fan, we all are. And I realize that ice cream cones aren't outlawed in Carmel, but it's fun, it's comedy."

The song pokes fun at Carmel and Eastwood's images, cleverly mixing some of Eastwood's better-known movie titles with some of Carmel's oddities, like the lack of public restrooms ("All these folks come to the Hog's Breath Inn just to use my bathroom!"). The song itself is almost a country-rap with a steady backbeat and background theme from The Good, The Bad and The Ugly, Eastwood's popular spaghetti western.

Christ said he had some reservations about doing the song, which was written, recorded and released in a span of eight days, debuting on KMBY March 14. Christ, who lives in Pebble Beach, said he didn't want the band to come off as exploiting the situation, but decided they could have some fun with the situation anyway.

"We should have some fun out of it (all the hype and hoopla of the current election), but we're also serious about our craft. We've been around and can back up what we do."

Eastwood seemed a bit bemused by the attention the song, which he said he hasn't heard yet, is getting, but is taking it all in a stride in this highly unusual campaign. His daughter Alison is reportedly a Flys fan and has shown up at some of the band's concerts reports Christ.

The band will probably debut the song live in Santa Cruz on April 4, four days before the election. Asked if they'll do anything special to debut the song (a video is in the works), Christ said: "You know us, we'll play it up."

PINE WHISPERS

Seeing green

HAS EVERYONE had their fill of green beer, green cheesecake and shamrocks? If not you must have missed the hundreds of St. Paddy's Day parties around the peninsula.

Two of the best were the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross open house the afternoon of March 17 and benefit party at the Hyatt Regency Monterey later that night.

The Red Cross affair featured a mind-boggling display of desserts, compliments of area businesses, from brownies and sinful chocolate cakes to cookies and yes, green cheesecake.

Red Cross board member Phil Gray passed out green carnations while inside amateur pastry chefs competed for the best dessert in the "Red Cross volunteer" category.

At the Hyatt an eclectic roster of musicians held forth in a benefit for the Monterey County Special Olympics that must have attracted upwards of 400 people, most of them wearing green, of course.

Bands included Irish folk band Shanachie, the Monterey Pipe Band, The Groove Merchants and local rock group The Young Presidents, who jammed with local musicians Mike Lent and Robby Evans well past midnight to an enthusiastic audience.

Special Olympics must have done great that night judging from the crowd. Not bad for a Monday night.

JUST AN itty-bitty piece of cake? Carmel-by-the-Sea Red Cross chapter director Sue "Ad" Addleman, left, seems to be asking the assemblage at the Red Cross' St. Patrick's Day open house. Phil Gray, right, handed out green carnations to everyone, while Jean Snow, center, kept the spirits high, making sure everyone tasted some of the plentiful desserts provided by local businesses. It's a dog's world at Carmel Valley groomers

JUDY MCCARTHY, owner of Suds 'n Scissors, brushes Riot, whose show name is "de Russy Notoriety."

Story and photos
By Holly McFarland

MANY OF us can say that our job has gone to the dogs, but Judy McCarthy can say it with a smile on her face.

Inside "Suds n' Scissors" McCarthy clips away at the princess-like Mitzi, a grey poodle with an aristocratic air. Shaking bath water off while Jana Abraham ducks from the spray is Beau, an airedale readying for a flea soap. Meanwhile Whimsey puts a bear hug on Roy Amaral as he tries to comb every last snarl and matt from her belly.

Such is a typical day in the life of McCarthy, the owner and chief groomer at Suds n' Scissors, with two locations in Carmel Valley — one at the mouth of the Valley and another in Carmel Valley Village.

McCarthy's popular proprietorship attracts as many as 50 dog owners from as far away as the San Francisco Bay who come down on a regular monthly basis.

And McCarthy knows each of her canine customers well. After 24 years of catering to their every grooming need, she literally knows every inch of their terrain. Even when the long-haired dogs come through her shop, such as the poodles, cockers, Afghans, Old English Sheepdogs, and collies, McCarthy is well prepared.

"If I left Carmel I would not be in the grooming business," says McCarthy. It is easy to see why. Her booming grooming business means a tight scheduling of 20 to 30 dogs each day. Her clientele, she says, are exclusive animal owners.

"I think I probably have the finest clientele that any groomer could have," she says. "I like customers who are real concerned about their animals, and that means I am concerned."

Her dogs to-be-groomed fall into a varied range, from shorthaired dachshunds to her own champion black standard poodle, Riot.

Sharing her wide range of experiences, McCarthy sums up the importance of her work.

"There's no breed of dog that doesn't need some kind of grooming," McCarthy says. "Even short haird dachshunds need to be bathed on a continual basis, with a coat kept in good condition, nails trimmed as part of good health."

Grooming by McCarthy's definition doesn't mean out-of-pocket expenses spent on endless hours of spiffing animals unnecessarily, but rather good dog sense about proper feeding, brushing, and care done on a regular basis.

"If you don't spend the money here for basic care, eventually you will probably have to pay it at the vet's," added Abraham.

McCarthy's recipe for a well-kept animal isn't a prototype ready for the Madison Square Garden show ring, but a basic cut she refers to as pet grooming.

MCCARTHY STRESSES that keeping the dog groomed on a regular basis is important for a healthy, clean and long life.

Here are some of her grooming pointers:

• Groom on a regular basis while checking for signs of skin disorders, parasites and foxtails.

• Watch for overgrown toenails and have them trimmed regularly.

• Poodles and other "high maintenance" dogs should receive a half hour of thorough combing and brushing every day, clear down to the skin along with regular bathing and clipping. Otherwise, the undercoat is left matted and unclean.

• Ensure you have the correct grooming equipment, different dogs require specific brushes.

• Groom systematically, gently brushing the fine hair on the ears and throat; then, beginning with the neck and shoulders, brush out the hair, clear down to the skin. If matted hair won't come loose with a comb, then cut with scissors.

• Grooming also means combing the tail, underbody and legs. Check the ears on a regular basis, cleaning with a swab with a cotton ball dipped in alcohol if there seems to be a build up of wax.

Expecting the groomer to perform all the miracles is like washing your own hair once a month without combing any snarls and leaving the rest to the beauty parlor, McCarthy says.

WHO'S COMBING who? Ross Amaral tries to brush Whimsley's leg, but it seems more like Whimsey is the one who should be doing the combing.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Florida remains the favorite destination for about 25 percent of Americans over age 65 who relocate. California has seen a drop in the number of seniors moving there for their retirement years — from 9.7 percent of the total in 1970 to about 8.7 percent in 1980. So says Charles Longino, Jr., director of the Center for Social Research on Aging at the University of Miami. His six-year study for the National Institute on Aging found that in 1970, some 1.1 million older Americans had moved across state lines. By 1980 that figure had grown to 1.6 million. Longino predicts that the number will rise to 2 million by the year 2000.

A Penny Saved in Taxes Is A Penny Earned

FRANKLIN FEDERAL TAX-FREE INCOME FUND

8.28% Current Annualized Yield*

16.56% Equivalent Taxable Yield

Today, every penny counts. Now make sure they add up. This Fund invests exclusively in municipal bonds, which makes the income 100% free of Federal income taxes.

For example, if you're in the maximum tax bracket, you pay the Federal government $500 of every $1,000 earned from a fully taxable investment. When you invest in this Fund, you can keep the whole $1,000. † So, a yield of 8.28% equivalent to a taxable yield of 16.56% for investors in the maximum Federal tax bracket. The Fund pays monthly dividends.

*Current yield based upon an annualization of the monthly dividends paid by the Fund since Mar. 6, 1986 and the offering price on xxxxxxx xx, xxxx. The Fund uses a commonly accepted accounting principle known as equalization. The Fund's yield varies with changes in dividends paid and the offering price. The value of your investment at redemption may be more or less than your cost.

†A portion may be subject to state and local taxes.

"GARY BECHARD with hangers" could be the title of this artistic interpretation of Bechard by Michael Gardner. Bechard is manager of Hi-Tech Sportswear in The Crossroads, opening in a couple of weeks. Lazy, hazy days...of spring?

ISWEAR, my brain has taken a walk this week. No matter how hard I try, there doesn't seem to be anything to talk about. I know that there's some giant story just lying out there all ready to be plucked up by some intrepid reporter but I guess intrepid just is not my style right now.

Owner Kathleen Cardinalli has had a month-to-month lease since 1982 and the Plaza asked her to move out early last year. Exactly why is not yet known. Carmel Plaza won its suit for unlawful detainer against Cardinalli.

Cardinelli has her own countersuit for $50 million in punitive damages against the Plaza, primarily citing that Carmel Plaza part-owner and leasing agent Stephen Jacobs has a conflict of interest because he is part-owner of the Plaza Cafe and Harbinger Restaurant, now owned by Jacobs and Plaza owner Gerson Bakar. The suit also alleges fraud by the Plaza and emotional distress inflicted by the eviction.

Another lawsuit in Federal Court that claimed The Carmel Plaza discriminated against her because she is a single woman, has been dropped.

However, no one is talking because of a restraining order placed on the litigants by Monterey Superior Court Judge Harkjoon Paik.

CARMEL PLAZA

What's happening with the Left Bank cafe in Carmel Plaza? At this point, it will vacate its premises in Carmel Plaza in about three months after a year of lawsuits to attempt to remain.

Lovely to have...

BUSINESS BEAT
BY NANCY HILLS

In the meantime, Cardinalli is looking for a space to move her cafe, which has been located in the Plaza for 11 years. By the way, it is one of the few places around town that serves ice cream cones — though I'm beginning to hate those three words.

Rumors that merchants in the Plaza are banding together to sue Gerson Bakar and the Plaza appear to remain just that — rumors. The merchants are getting together to form an association, but the group's president, John McCormack, owner of The Cheese Shop in the Plaza, said that it was only to further better communications between the tenants and management and promote advertising. Other merchants involved say the same thing — no lawsuit is planned.

"I'll guarantee that," McCormack said.

Representatives of the Plaza all have lockjaw due to the lawsuit with Left Bank and there is no comment coming from them about the association.

BIZ BEAT BANTER

Other than the Carmel Plaza, I don't have much to say but I'll pass on the little things I've heard.

Grace Darcy, executive director of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce, has left that post to try her hand at freelancing. Haven't had a chance to chat with her about it yet. The chamber, I understand, has returned the money it received as a grant to set up low-rent offices in Mid-Valley because of high insurance rates, so that program has been called off.

• Toni Doyle, who until recently worked at Highlands Inn sales department, is happy freelancing, doing pretty much the same thing she did at the Highlands Inn. She is working with Gloria McPhearson of Resort II Me in Monterey matching up hotels and groups looking for hotels.

Her husband, Cal Jepson, who was assistant to former Highlands Inn general manager Ron Matthews, who has also left the inn, will be taking over as general manager of the new Carmel Valley Ranch in Mid-Valley.

As for Matthews, no word yet on what he is doing except flying back and forth to Hawaii.

• No one is jumping and shouting about the business the AT&T Pro-Am brought in. Even though the rains cut the tournament short and it looked like the people all poured into Carmel from Pebble Beach, businesses didn't clean up, that's for sure. Even a few of the hotels are complaining. Some had vacancies, an unheard of phenomenon during the old Bing Crosby Clambake. This, however, is not a scientific study, just the result of a casual "Well, how'd you do during the golf tournament" poll. If you know any differently, give me a shout.

• People are asking how we are doing here at the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook and we're all just dandy. Buried alive by journalists from all over the world looking into our local politics, but just fine otherwise.

I probably have the distinction of being the only person in town who has not been interviewed by the London Times or whoever else is around.

What else, what else? Well, while I write this, the sun is shining, I've the itch to go play and just can't take anything seriously on nice days like this, can you?

Finally decided to get some exercise and went for a waddle on Carmel Beach. I was ready, but apparently the beach wasn't because it was GONE. Washed out to sea during the storms — did you see those waves! But I understand it will be back with the summer tides.

LEFT OUT

I left out the address of A Stitch in Tyme in Biz Beat last week. It's on Carmel Rancho Lane. Maybe I should do the entire column without addresses and make it a real challenge. You'll find it if you really need to.

CARMEL PLAZA merchants are in the processes of forming a merchants association in order to improve communication with management. Some tenants reportedly are nervous because they have short term leases. (Nancy Hills photo.)

NOT BOARD

There are no surfboards at the shop, but surfers and those who like the look will be the target customer nonetheless.

Gary and Gail Bechard will open and manage Hi-Tech Sportswear at The Crossroads in about two weeks. Gail's mother, Phyllis Madruga, is the owner of the shop.

Hi-Tech will be starting out with men's clothes from manufacturers like Gotcha, Catchit, Motto, Jimmyz and Stussy. (Sounds like the San Quentin morning roll call to me, but I'm definitely not in the "too hip" category.)

Instead of making you an offer you can't refuse, the names represent makers of sweatshirts, T-shirts, jackets, pants and socks, clamdiggers, Bermuda walking shorts, swim trunks and M. Julian jackets. There are also trench coats, another rather interesting clothing combination I'm still puzzling over. Sunglasses from Bausch and Lomb, Wayfarers and Vuarnet are a little more understandable.

"Everything is 100 percent cotton so it's all washable and no ironing," said Gary Bechard. A lot of colors, including fluorescent ones, too.

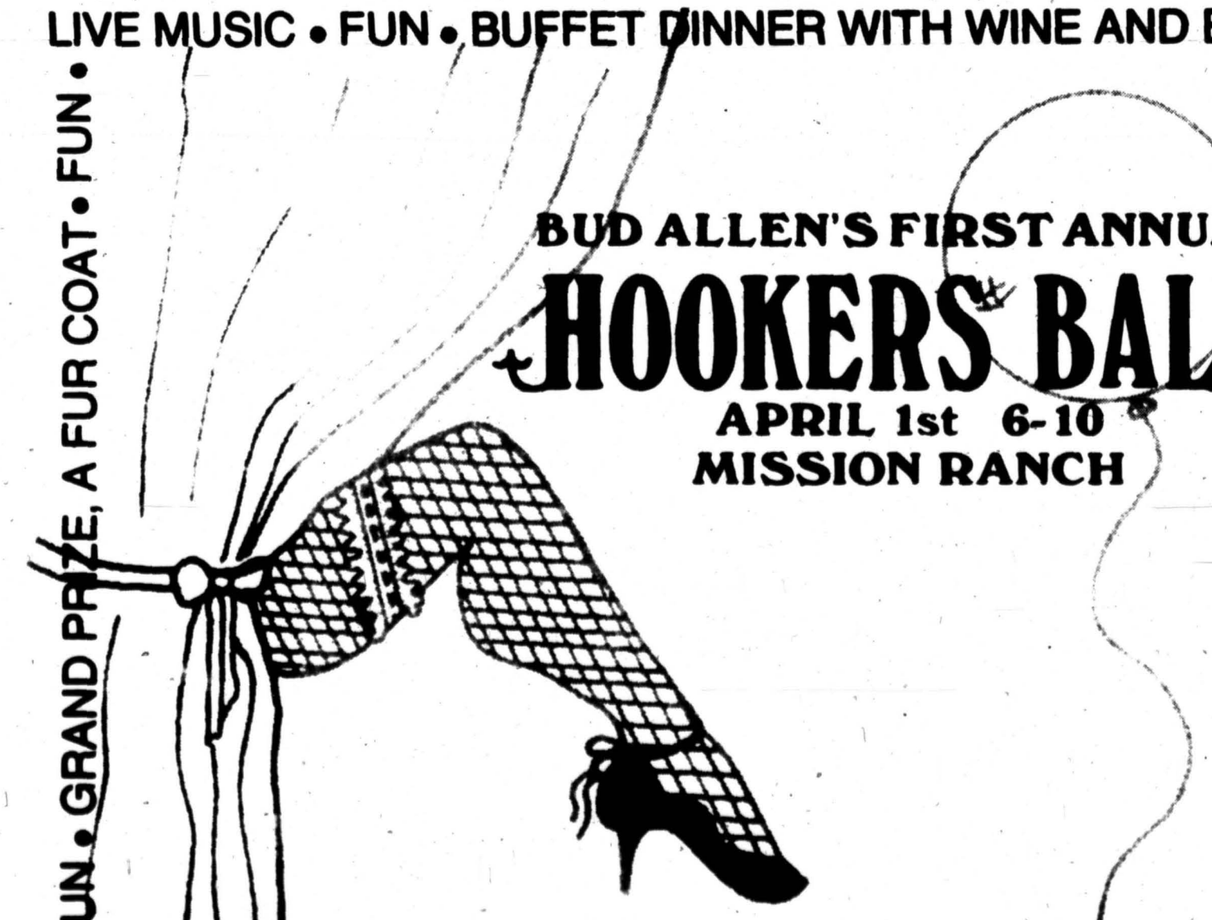

Bechard should know what surfers like because he said he's been one for 22 years and just migrated here from Orange County. (I did too, so I can vouch for the fact there are definitely people who wear fluorescent clothes down there.)

For the moments in water, there are astrodeck and astrodeck wax — good for the colder climes, according to Bechard; wetsuits will be coming and surfboards can be special ordered through the shop.

Frances Thompson captures 'the myriad beings'

She illustrates textbooks, guides and travels the world to paint

By ANNE PAPINEAU

PENINSULA ARTIST FRANCES Thompson has illustrated such diverse works as The Tassajara Bread Book, Point Lobos: An Illustrated Walker's Handbook and identification panels for The Monterey Bay Aquarium. An exhibit of her recent paintings, "Homage to the Myriad Beings," can be viewed at the Stilwell Studio on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln in Carmel. (Holly McFarland photograph.)

LIKE THE DANCER who must rehearse each day to keep in form, Frances Thompson takes up her brush and practices Chinese calligraphy "to keep my hand, fingers, arm and shoulder muscles in trim to paint."

"I'm not attempting to paint in the Chinese style. I'm just trying to use my brush as a tool," she explained.

Some of Thompson's earliest memories are of drawing — forged while still a toddler in her native Japan. Her subjects were those she still turns to — flowers, plants and animals. Born in Yokohoma, the daughter of a steamship agent, Thompson recalled that "Japanese was my first language. I wouldn't speak English until I had to."

Her family returned to the states when she was only two, and she admits that she has forgotten how to speak Japanese. But an Asian sensitivity permeates her artwork.

Thompson's drawings and paintings take multiple forms. She illustrated The Tassajara Bread Book, a 1971 text that remains the best-seller of Berkeley-based Shambhala press. Her knowledge of biological illustration brought her the task of executing exhibit identification panels for the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

In cooperation with the Point Lobos Natural History Association, Thompson wrote, illustrated and published Point Lobos, An Illustrated Walker's Handbook.

The artist keeps a lot of projects going at once. She is developing books for the Monterey Bay Aquarium and the California Academy of Sciences. And a collection of her recent paintings can be viewed at the Stilwell Studio on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln streets in Carmel. The collection is titled, "Homage to the Myriad Beings," and depicts with deft brushstrokes graphically intense images of goldfish, halved avocados, beets and cats.

'Chinese painting seems closer to the heart of the earth. Buddhism always includes all the sentient beings. It's not so human-centered as a lot of Western art.'

"Chinese painting seems closer to the heart of the earth. Buddhism always includes all the sentient beings. It's not so human-centered as a lot of Western art," she said of this new collection, which takes its name from a Buddhist term.

Last spring Thompson "hopscotched all over China with a group of artists. I am a member of the American Society for the Advancement of Chinese Art. We visited painting academies. I want to go back and study. I found a place to do that."

Next month the society will journey to Yosemite on a drawing and painting expedition, and Thompson will be with them.

Although Thompson left the Far East while very young, her spiritual and artistic bonds with Asia remain strong.

"I grew up in a household of Japanese things, furniture, objects, dishes — so Eastern style never seemed bizaare to me. I took graphic art at UCLA because I was afraid fine art was not very practical. The fashion then was to fill the frame with stuff. I was drawing things in isolation on the canvas and getting reprimanded by the art teachers."

A student of Zen Buddhism since the mid-1960s, Thompson lived and work in the Ventana Wilderness at Tassajara Zen Mountain Center from 1969 to 1971.

"I was head gardener my first year and a half, then I was appointed to be tenzo (head cook). It was like being chef in a big restaurant. The kitchen was hot in the summer, cool in the winter. Everyone was very sincere in practicing Zen Buddhism and meditation. We were just starting this place from nothing. It was the first Zen Buddhist training center outside of Japan, and the only one with both men and women.

"I still do some meditation, not a lot. I sit with a couple of friends twice a week. Buddhism includes all creatures, rocks and mountains. It really appeals to me, as does Oriental painting. The Western tradition tends to aggrandize people."

Following her Tassajara years, Thompson secured another job as cook to the pastor of All Saints' Church in Carmel. At a dinner party she met Alison Stilwell Cameron, the Carmel artist who studied classical Chinese brush painting as a young woman in China.

"I immediately began taking her classes in Chinese painting," Thompson noted. "She really made us study, drill and drill on the basic strokes in that very traditional, controlled style."

"I know it's hopeless for me to try to paint like a Chinese," Thompson added. "My Western drawing foundation will never go away. I'm only trying to use the brush, because it's such a wonderful tool."

Upon visiting China last year, she discovered that the Chinese appreciate the Western Impressionist movement.

"Their work is slightly Westernized now," she observed. "It's impossible to do pure painting. The people in centuries past never saw these other painting styles."

Thompson divides her artistic life chiefly between painting and book illustration.

ARTS & LEISURE

"If I do a job for a publisher everything is in a rush. I must work all day every day, around the clock."

She uses Eastern tools — tube colors from China, drawing cake colors made in Japan and Chinese ink stone.

Biological illustration is one of Thompson's specialties. In 1963 she studied invertebrate zoology at Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove. Thompson's Point Lobos: An Illustrated Walker's Handbook is thus noteworthy not only for its drawing and drafting quality, but the accuracy of the creatures it depicts.

"It's very exacting work. There are exactly so many points to the edge of a shell. I just like to sit down in front of things and draw them. I do a lot of painting on the spot."

'I think there's some super-reality about something when it is in front of you, as though the life of what you're drawing gets on the page. When I try to paint from a drawing, it never works as well.'

Thompson was for three years a fixture at Point Lobos State Reserve, drawing and painting "on the spot" the birds, plants and mammals that reside there. Her book, now in its second printing, faithfully records scrub jays, stellar sea lions and lizard-tail yarrow.

"I think there's some super-reality about something when it is in front of you, as though the life of what you're drawing gets on the page. When I try to paint from a drawing, it never works as well."

Frances Thompson's "Homage to the Myriad Beings" can be viewed through March 31 at Stilwell Studio in Carmel. For exhibit details, call 624-0340.

JERSEY COW RESTING*, a 1984 brush painting by Frances Thompson, reflects her Asian-inspired artistic style. Thompson uses Chinese and Japanese inks and pigments, and practices her brushwork even when her days are occupied filling a book illustration order. Since 1983 she has studied Chinese calligraphy with Min Chiang W. Lin of Pebble Beach.

Scottish harpist performs

AN EVENING of original and traditional Celtic stories and songs with Robin Williamson will be offered Saturday, March 22 at the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

The concert, which will begin at 8 p.m., is presented by public-supported radio station KAZU, 90.3 FM.

Born in Edinburgh, Scotland in 1943, Williamson first came to fame as founder and guiding force of the Incredible String Band. From the years 1965 to 1974, the band logged more LP chart entries than any other British group apart from Cream, the Rolling Stones, the Beatles and The Who.

When the group disbanded, Williamson went on to form his own group, The Merry Band. He recorded three more LPs, and since 1980 he has essentially recorded and toured solo. The New York Times in 1981 compared his performance to "... a Dylan Thomas reminiscence in its combination of linguistic precision and sensuous lyricism."

In 1982 and 1983 Williamson engaged in two collaborations with Geoff Moore, director of the Welsh mixed media company Moving Being. These were Tree of Leaf and Flame for which Williamson composed text and music and Moore the dances; and the Mabinogi, a large scale outdoor production of the ancient Welsh legends of Cardiff and Caernarfon Castles.

In early 1984 Williamson completed three new works: Selected Writings 1980-83; Five Humorous Tales of Scotland and Ireland and Legacy of the Scottish Harpers. More recent projects include four new spoken word cassettes of classic Celtic material. He is also seeking to establish a non-profit organization which will strive to replant parts of Scotland with native trees and hedgerows.

Williamson performs on a myriad of instruments, such as Celtic harp, Scottish border bagpipes, cittern and guitar.

Tickets to the Saturday concert are $6.50 in advance, $7.50 at the door. Tickets can be purchased at Bookworks in Pacific Grove; Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561; Recycled Records in New Monterey and Do Re Mi Music in The Barnyard, Carmel. For more information, call 375-7275.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Obsession observed in MPC's 'Amadeus'

PETER SHAFFER'S Amadeus, now on the main stage at Monterey Peninsula College, takes up the poignant theme of Mozart's early, impoverished death and fills in the blanks with an ingeniously mad plot by Austrian court composer Antonio Salieri to systematically destroy the young genius. The plot is the more poignant as it is framed with the possibility of existing only in Salieri's imagination. Unlike the much loved film, Amadeus leaves Mozart's possible murder in question.

So Amadeus is an evening as it were staged and directed by Antonio Salieri (Larry Welch) in which he is both principal player and dynamic narrator, presenting to us, he explains, his "final composition, the death of Mozart." Yet we are aware, almost continually, that this too is Salieri's delusion. At least possibly. For Salieri presents instead, scene after scene, an intimate catalog of his obsession with Mozart's apparent musical divinity, his own mediocrity, and God's insufferable choice of a giggling, ill-mannered boy as the vessel for his divine voice.

As obsessions will, this one changes Salieri from the rather humorless but sincere working musician of the play's early scenes into the darkly vivacious villain of early revenge drama, planning and executing each evil act with glee. Welch's Salieri is often likable, bemused, a character easy to identify with. He leaps 30 years, from his prime to old age, in view of the audience, showing us by turns the seeds of his obsession and their fruit.

In Salieri's war with God, "Mozart is the battleground." Amadeus would be no more than a skillful exercise in character assassination were it not for Shaffer's careful crafting of the character of Salieri, for Shaffer's Salieri is an 18th-century Everyman, with all the desires and weaknesses and sheer animal cunning of the species.

THE PROGRESS OF Salieri's madness parallels the spiraling down of Mozart's fortunes to untimely and perhaps unnecessary death. Shaffer's portrayal of Mozart himself is unfair to the composer, but the essentials are right. Dead at 35, the always youthful Mozart (Norman Stottmeister) is loud, boorish, gay to the point of near hysteria, and insufferably aware of his genius. His rude jokes repel the priggish court of the Austrian emperor. Like a child, he is incapable of hypocrisy, making enemies with stunning effortlessness with his acerbic judgments of his musical peers.

In Amadeus, Mozart is clearly the small town victim of big city politics and intrigues. The man who hears the voice of angels so clearly that his act of composition is mere transcription is deaf and blind to the machinations of lesser demons. Mozart is easy meat for Salieri and the emperor's exalted gang of musical henchmen. Stottmeister's gawky, foppish Mozart also changes and grows, from an unappealing boorish upstart to a tentative, pathetic presence, often frighter , finally re ating into childhood, but somehow not reduced, as Salieri crows, but simply finished.

Directed by Peter DeBono, this show is well cast in the lead performers as well as in the choice of Geha Gonthier as Constance, Mozart's silly but plucky wife. Amadeus employs rich costuming by Constance Gamiere designed to evoke the era in an otherwise colorful but nonrealistic setting. Mozart's wonderful music is not much of a presence in this production, but rather a slight echo underscoring Salieri's impromptu comments on the fineness of Mozart's compositions. The slightness of the music is perhaps the production's one weakness, for "God's art," the glorious point of Salieri's contention with God, is more often talked about rather than experienced.

What emerges instead is the relentless progress of obsession and revenge, with the historic greatness of the principal characters upping the ante almost to tragic proportions.

Besotted threesome

The training will take place at the Salinas Community Center and will consist of four full-day workshops.

Workshops and their dates are "Management of Common Medical Problems and Medication Concerns in the Dependent Elderly," offered March 21; "Make Yourself at Home: Easing the Trauma of Relocation," April 18; "I Care About You, But You're Driving Me Crazy: Handling the Difficult Client," May 16; "Dementia, Delirium, Depression: What's the Difference and What Can I Do?" — a training and resource information day, June 6.

Each day begins with registration at 8:30 a.m. and continues until 3:30 p.m. Lunch is included.

This series is designed for residential care home operators, nursing home staff, family caregivers and others wishing to know more about helping dependent older adults and minimizing the trauma of relocation. Advance registration is recommended as enrollment is limited. There is a $6 charge for individual sessions or a $20 fee for the series of four.

ART NOTES
BY SAM COLBURN

Weston retrospectives reflect uncommon vision

A FEW YEARS AGO a number of photographs were auctioned off at the Pacific Grove Art Center. I had never realized until that time how important the Monterey Peninsula was to photography in the United States. What impressed me was the fact that a young man came all the way from Christie's in New York at his own expense to be the auctioneer, as he said that the two most important centers in the United States for photography were New York and the Monterey Peninsula.

Edward Weston's position as a central figure in 20th century American photography is firmly established, and it is because of him, more than any other artist in the medium, that Carmel and the area down through the Highlands became so well known and attractive to other snappers of the shutter.

Weston first came to Carmel in 1925 to visit Johan Hagemeyer, who was a fine photographer and a kind and gentle man. At that time Edward was living with his wife and their four sons in Los Angeles, but his studio was a short distance away in Glendale. He and his wife became divorced, and Edward moved to Carmel with part of the family in 1929. They lived, when they first arrived at least, with Hagemeyer. In 1935 he returned to the Southland where he stayed in Santa Monica Canyon. In 1938 the whole family made a permanent move to this area, where Weston bought property above Wildcat Creek in the Carmel Highlands. His son, Neil Weston, is a master carpenter, and built the house and studio in which Edward lived and worked until his death.

This retrospective is a massive show contained in four different galleries. They are the Photography West Gallery, the Weston Gallery and the Friends of Photography Gallery in Carmel. The large main gallery of the Monterey Museum of Art shows Weston in company with many local photographers and a few with whom I am not acquainted.

Apparently his work changed dramatically after he had seen the modern paintings in the San Francisco World's Fair in 1915, and after becoming friends with Stieglitz, Strand and Sheeler in New York in 1922.

What an artist has to offer is personal imagery. Edward Weston had an eye that found interest in all things living or dead. I personally feel that his photographs of the works of man are not comparable to his "seeing" of organic form. I would make an exception to this generalization in his shot of New York City which is on view at the museum. In this work he has captured the verticality of Manhattan.

HEAD OF NEILL*, a circa 1925 platinum print made by Edward Weston, depicts the photographer's son. An Edward Weston retrospective continues at The Weston Gallery on Sixth Avenue near Dolores Street in Carmel.

AS I UNDERSTAND it, the photographer tries not only for the major shapes but also the finest detail. Weston did this as you can see in his gnarled trees on Point Lobos, but he also forgot detail and was concerned with form within a certain area. This is what he did in many of the nude studies. It was Cezanne who stated that the perfect picture was one in which if you changed one part you would have to change the whole painting. I get this concept of form as evident in Edward Weston's photography.

In the Photography West Gallery there is one print that has always fascinated me. The picture contains a low building on the wall of which there appears to be a large framed canvas of a nude. As it happens this was Weston's studio, and the nude is actually posing in a window. It is the beautiful Charis Wilson. What attracts me is the mystery. The same thing happens in another work in the same gallery. There is a beautiful white seashell with fringes floating somehow against low, dark, convoluted hills. This is surrealism. I got some of the same feeling in Untitled, 1939, but not from the illogical association of subject matter. It is just the strangeness of a man's body half in a swimming pool and half out, but lying there perfectly straight. This photo is in the Friends of Photography Gallery. Dry Salt Pool, Point Lobos in the same gallery is mysterious as the forms created are not recognizable as subject matter.

In the Photography West Gallery there are several portraits of women. The faces are all strong and interesting, but soft too. Weston was not of the pimple and pore school. One lady looks like a young Pilar — her name, Guadelupe Marin de Rivera.

Perhaps his best known images are those of shells, peppers and nudes. He did a lot for seashells. The shapes become fascinating. They are all curve. This is true for peppers, too. The subject is in fine detail against a dark field. In this way he developed form which, in a way, transcends subject matter. This is true again with many of the nudes. Only part of the body may be shown, and always with the thought of positive and negative space. These bodies may be sensual, but never sexual.

In the Weston Gallery there is one photo of a flower. It has radiance. It is the miracle of an organism with some magic fluid insinuated at the bottom of the calyx.

OVER AT THE Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art the full scope of this retrospective becomes evident. Presented on the 100th anniversary of his birth, The Weston Years shows why this area has become so important in photography, and why "seeing with the camera" has become a mature art. They all have prints there, all of his contemporaries. Ansel Adams also had much to do with the attraction of freelance photographers here. I do not know if Johan Hagemeyer was the first photographer on the peninsula, but he was a strong influence, too. He is represented with several small prints. His use of a small area is fascinating. I like his Rocks and Surf. Imogen Cunningham of Twinka fame did not, as far as I know, live here, but she is very much a part of the blooming of photography. Her Magnolia makes me wonder if she influenced Georgia O'Keeffe or vice versa.

Surprisingly enough Carmel artist Henrietta Shore is represented by a photograph of a water lily.

Brett Weston has a large print, Untitled, which is a breakthrough, for me at least, as the strong relation of lights and darks takes it out of the representational into the abstract. Cole's Water Tank, in color, is beautiful and completely abstract.

In general I think of the work of Edward Weston as being romantic. He loved life and the forms of the organic. His "seeing" will be with us for a long time. I have never been sympathetic with the hyper realists. They want to rub your nose in the dirt.

CALIFORNIA NORTH SUR COAST GARRAPATA TROUT FARM

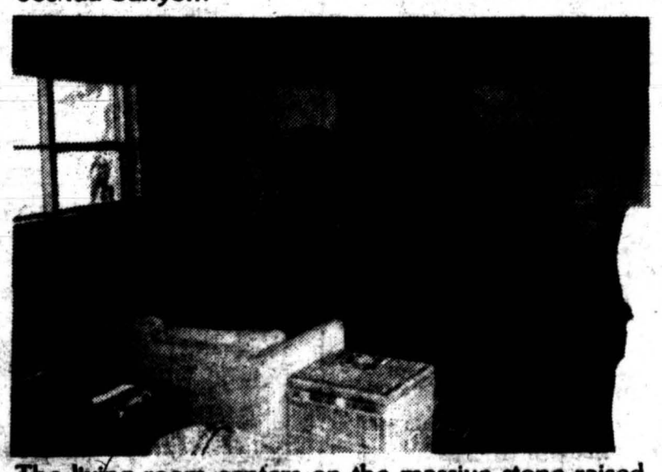

Garrapata Creek flows into the Pacific at the south end of the magnificent sand beach pictured above. The Trout Farm nestles at the juncture of Garrapata and Joshua Canyons. Access is via a level country road meandering for a half-mile inland from the Scenic Highway to the property's more than 40 acres of hills and canyons.

Looking down from the Santa Lucia foothills onto the mini-valley with the principal residence on a ridge near the west end of the acreage. To the east, across the meadow, are the trout raceways. The trout ponds are obscured by the trees.

View westwards with the main residence on its knoll overlooking the smoke houses and homestead, which is now for operating the trout farm business. The rustic resident of about 2,000 sq. ft. includes 2 bedrooms and one bath on the main floor, along with large living room and family kitchen with dining area. On the second floor is a huge master bedroom with bath, plus a small fourth bedroom or study. The manager's pleasant 3 bedroom, 2 bath home is located up Joshua Canyon.

The living room centers on the massive stone raised fireplace. At the opposite end is an open stairway ascending to the second story. The dining room, overlooking a spacious deck with valley views, is open to the kitchen with its restaurant quality equipment. The combination of a trout farm business with land enjoying two live creeks, two residences, privacy and ready access to Monterey Peninsula, lends itself to creation of a unique Sur Coast estate. Price is $890,000.* Our Coastal Division will be pleased to send a detailed summary and visit Garrapata Trout Farm with you at your convenience.

CANNERY ROW GUIDE

Cannery Row — the street immortalized in John Steinbeck's novel and by a little silver fish — is one of the highlights of a visit to the Monterey Peninsula.

The mile-long Row curves along the shores of Monterey Bay from the Coast Guard Station to the former site of the Hovden Cannery, now home to the state-of-the-art Monterey Bay Aquarium.

"The sardine capital of the world" had humble beginnings around the turn of the century when F.E. Booth built the first fish packing plant. As the local pilchard (or sardine) became a gourmet delicacy rather than bait for salmon fishermen, demand outdistanced supply.

An Italian fisherman, Pietro Ferrante, and a Norwegian canning expert, Knut Hovden, changed the course of Cannery Row's history. Ferrante imported Italian fishing nets; Hovden modernized packing methods. The nets made it possible to scoop of tons of fish with one haul.

Purse seines eventually replaced the Italian lampara nets and were capable of scooping up more fish than the smaller fishing boats could carry! World War II created a new boom for Cannery Row, which by now boasted a number of small groceries and other businesses tucked in among the canneries, as well as the biology laboratory of Ed "Doc" Ricketts.

In 1945, Cannery Row packed more than 235,000 tons of sardines in 19 operating canneries. But there were some pessimists among the fish-packing optimists — marine biologist Ed "Doc" Ricketts, among them. He warned that overfishing might destroy the entire industry.

In 1946, Cannery Row packed 142,000 tons; by 1948, only 14,000 tons were processed. And in 1951, after a brief comeback, there were no sardines at all. Doc Ricketts maintained they had all gone into cans.

As the canneries closed, they fell into ramshackle disrepair and were frequently destroyed by uncontrollable fires.

There are still enough of the hulking cannery buildings, however, and the overpasses that cross Cannery Row, to retain the flavor, if not the aroma, of the past. That the canneries now house restaurants and art galleries makes them all the more accessible and interesting; after all, who would visit a sardine packing plant?

The Row is now the home of many fine restaurants that serve everything from fresh local seafood to Chinese, Italian and Continental cuisine, not to mention Sunday brunch.

No longer is Cannery Row deserted after dark. Now there are bright lights, laughter and the sound of music. Visitors can enjoy a variety of entertainment in restaurant cocktail lounges and there are several spots that offer dancing to live music.

THE THREE-STORY, 335,000 gallon Kelp Forest tank in the Monterey Bay Aquarium can be viewed from two levels. More than 5,000 specimens, most of them native to Monterey Bay, can be viewed in the $40 million complex, which opened in October 1984.

Constructed in "the footprint" of the Hovden Cannery on the west end of Cannery Row is the Monterey Bay Aquarium. The $40 million aquarium opened in October of 1984. Its 83 tanks are home to more than 5,000 fishes, mammals, birds, invertebrates and plants, virtually all of which can be found in Monterey Bay.

The aquarium is a place where visitors can gaze up into the cathedral-like branches of a kelp forest as a diver explains its intricacies from the other side of the seven-inch window, stare eye-to-eye with a tank's worth of frisky sea otters and brave petting a bat ray with no stinger.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Christmas. For recorded information about the aquarium, call 375-3333.
